Shipyard Abuses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice Adm. H. G. Rickover has told Congress American shipyards are poorly managed, with many workers loafing on the job.

Meanwhile, he said, the Russians are expanding an "already far superior" shipbuilding capability.

In closed-door testimony May 10, released Wednesday by the House Appropriations Committee, Rickover said he has "often called the attention of shipyard commanders and Navy officials to what is going on in the yards. I have seen little result."

Rickover said he has given Navy officials examples of overtime abuses that have been going on for years. He estimated the Navy could "save at least $50 million a year on overtime merely by tightening the controls."

Furthermore, Rickover said, "I constantly receive reports of gross situations in which workers are idle and their supervisors are taking no action to prevent it—in some instances supervisors have contributed and have been party to the loafing."

There are signs some Navy officials, Rickover said, "recognize that abuses of overtime and poor productivity exist and have existed for a long time. However, I am not optimistic that any lasting actions will be taken; too often these things cause a ripple but actions are short-lived."

The Soviets, meanwhile, "have four, possibly five, nuclear submarine building yards," he said, and turned out over 10 such subs last year, including a number of new design ships.

"In the same year we produced four, none of them new designs," he added.

Fischer—Spassky

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Bobby Fischer moved nearer to the world chess title Wednesday when champion Boris Spassky repeated a move three times, creating a draw.

Chess experts were bewildered, because Spassky appeared to have an edge to win the 17th game, resumed after being adjourned after the 40th move Tuesday. Spassky himself seemed surprised when Fischer claimed a draw.

Under the rules of chess, repeating the same move three times results in a draw, which counts half a point.

The draw gave Fischer a total of 10 points, putting him four-fifths of the way toward the title and preserving his three-point lead. Ten games is 80 per cent of the 12½ points he needs.

With only seven points, Spassky had the formidable task of amassing five points in the remaining seven games of the match. He needs 12 points to retain the title.

With each win counting a point, Spassky must defeat Fischer in three games and draw in the other four. Yet so far, he has beaten Fischer only twice in this championship series.

In addition, Fischer forfeited the second game to Spassky in a dispute over the use of television and movie cameras in the playing hall.

Detroit Busing

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Arguments on a controversial desegregation plan for Detroit and 52 adjacent suburban school districts will be heard Thursday by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The U.S. Justice Department already has asked the court to delay the plan, ordered by Judge Stephen J. Roth of the U.S. District Court in Flint, Mich.

In an intervening brief filed Aug. 14, the Justice Department cited a law signed by President Nixon on July 1.

That law requires postponement of district court orders requiring the transfer or transportation of students from their school attendance zones for the purpose of achieving a balance in race, sex, religion or economic status.

The NAACP, which initiated the Detroit desegregation case nearly two years ago, already has challenged the new law in the appeals court, saying it would delay the granting of constitutional rights.

Roth's plan to integrate the school systems in the Detroit metropolitan area by busing across school district lines grew from a series of hearings which followed his finding in September 1971 that the Detroit school system was guilty of de jure segregation.

Last June 14 he issued a plan for desegregation involving 780,000 students in Detroit and the 52 separate school districts.

He determined that full desegregation could not be completed before September 1973, and issued a temporary plan requiring the purchase of 295 buses for transportation of about 40,000 students this fall.

The purchase order was stayed by the appeals court July 20 pending appeal of Roth's integration order.

Northern Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A British soldier was shot to death Wednesday as terrorists set off seven bombs, using new supplies of chemical explosives which police said could be imported from Continental Europe.

The soldier was cut down by a sniper's bullet in the Roman Catholic Andersonstown district. The killing raised to 528 the fatality toll in three years of bloodletting in Northern Ireland.

The blasts shook a hotel, an office block, a factory, a home and the City Hall area. In each case the bombers gave advance warning and no one was hurt.

Police said nitrobenzene and sodium chlorate had been used to make the explosives. They said they were investigating possible Continental sources of supply because of the severe restrictions on these chemicals in Britain and Ireland.

Nixon Accepts Nomination

Agnew Selected For Veeep

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon accepted Republican renomination Wednesday night by urging Americans of all political faiths to unite as a new majority and reject "the policies of those who whine and whimper about our frustrations and call on us to turn inward."

"Let us not turn away from greatness," Nixon proclaimed to the cheers of a national convention hall ringed by police and barricades to ward off demonstrators who roamed nearby streets.

The roving bands of youths damaged or immobilized scores of cars, broke windows, set trash fires in the streets, and caused multiple traffic jams.

Police fought back with crowd-control gas and arrested about 580 demonstrators. Some injuries were reported on both sides.

After delegates ratified his choice of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew for the GOP No. 2 spot, Nixon openly solicited support of disenchanted Democrats and sharply attacked opponent George McGovern's proposals and philosophy, calling them dangerous to stability at home and abroad.

Nixon defended his Vietnam policies, claiming great progress toward ending the war, and pledged anew to seek a settlement that "will not stain the honor of the United States."

He disclosed no new developments in the search for "an honorable peace."

The President never mentioned McGovern by name in his prepared remarks, but he directed salvo after salvo of criticism at "our opponents."

He said the Democratic platform "promises everything to everybody" but would require a budget that would bring a 50 per cent increase in taxes and would mean that "wage earners would be working more for the government than they would for themselves."

In calling on voters "not to take a sharp detour to the left which would lead to a dead end," Nixon said: "We have made great progress in the past four years...America is a better place and the world is a safer place in which to live..."

He listed his trips to Peking and Moscow as "our most significant contributions to peace," claimed there is increasing cooperation between world powers and said U.S.-Soviet arms limitation accords were a first step in checking the nuclear race.

He added: "It can be truly said that as a result of our initiatives the danger of war is less. The chances for peace are greater."

But he said McGovern's proposed cuts in defense spending would destroy progress toward arms limits and dangerously threaten national security.

This nation, Nixon said, has "the opportunity in our time to be the peacemakers of the (Turn To Page 32) (See "Agnew")"

Issue Caution On POW Hope

WASHINGTON (AP) — A warning against any false optimism about treatment of American prisoners of war held by North Vietnam came Wednesday from Sen. James O. Eastland.

Eastland, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, said a study shows "a remarkable continuity of pattern" in the way Russian, Korean and Vietnam communists have dealt with prisoners of war.

The study is a survey of communist treatment of POWs, prepared by the Library of Congress at the Senate subcommittee's request.

In an introduction to the study, Eastland said: "The record here presented offers little room for optimism."

The study cites reports that as many as 1½ million prisoners taken by Soviet forces in World War II were never released or accounted for; that of the 75,000 United Nations and South Korean troops captured in the Korean war, only 12,000 got home, and that 26,000 of the 37,000 prisoners taken in the French war in Indochina never returned.

Eastland said that "in the eyes of communists everywhere POWs are not human beings but political pawns—to be broken psychologically so that they can be used against their own country and to be exploited, without pity of any kind, as instruments of political warfare directed, in the first instance against their own families."

Bizarre Drama Ends With Death, Prison

NEW YORK (AP) — A homosexual was held in $250,000 federal bail Wednesday, after a bizarre drama that began as a Brooklyn bank holdup.

It ended at dawn on a remote Kennedy Airport runway where his companion was shot to death by the FBI as a getaway plane stood by.

John Wojtowicz, 27, appeared before U.S. Magistrate Max S. Schiffman only a few hours after his fellow-bandit, Salvatore Naturale, was slain during their attempt to flee by plane with six of nine hostages they had seized in their $29,000 stick-up of a Chase Manhattan branch bank. Police described both as "Gay lib types."

Wojtowicz was charged with bank robbery and kidnapping. He was described as a former mental patient, and his court-appointed attorney said he would seek a psychiatric examination to determine if he was able to stand trial.

In the midst of the holdup of the Chase Manhattan branch in Sheepshead Bay, Wojtowicz threatened nine original hostages he and his companion had seized until police brought to the scene a man he described as his "wife"—Ernest Aaron, a mental patient at Kings County hospital in Brooklyn. Wojtowicz claimed they had gone through an informal "marriage" ceremony last December.

Aaron, 26, refused to join the two gunmen in an FBI-provided getaway limousine to Kennedy Airport, saying of Wojtowicz:

"He doesn't love me any more."

Throughout most of the 14-hour drama, the bandits were readily available for telephone interviews with newsmen. In one such, Wojtowicz called attention to the Supreme Court's recent decision against capital punishment, which he called "stupid."

"This way you don't have nothing to lose," Wojtowicz added, after saying they probably would not have robbed the bank had it not been for the court's stand.

Two of the nine hostages were released at the bank. The other seven rode to Kennedy Airport with the bandits in an airport-type limousine provided by the FBI and driven by the agent. There another captive was to be set free, while the six remaining were to accompany the robbers onto the plane.

A small jet taxied toward the limousine in apparent readiness to pick up the gunmen and the hostages—a man and six women.

Meanwhile, FBI agent Richard Baker moved to the limousine and began talking through a window with Wojtowicz.

At a signal from Baker, the FBI driver suddenly spun around and thrust away Naturale's shotgun which had been trained at his head. As part of the same motion, the agent shot Naturale through the chest, killing him almost instantly.

Street Battle Breaks Out In Miami Beach

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Hundreds of protesters bent on disrupting the Republican National Convention blocked streets, stoned cars and buses, set fires and broke windows Wednesday night.

They were met by massed forces and flying squads of police. Officials set the number arrested at about 580, bringing to almost 800 the number arrested in two days of demonstrations.

A crowd-control gas known as CS swirled through the streets near Convention Hall as police kept the demonstrators on the move in the hours before President Nixon was to accept his renomination.

The trouble erupted as about 3,000 youthful protesters left their park campsite and headed for Convention Hall. At least 1,000 broke away and began roving through the streets in scattered bands.

As the evening session got under way, most of the demonstrators had gathered in several large groups near the hall, the disruptive tactics apparently ended.

The hall itself was heavily guarded by police, with buses parked bumper to bumper to form barricades and the two main auto entrances barred to all but official vehicles.

Protest leaders earlier in the day had urged the demonstrators to try to block main entrances to the hall and key intersections but said the confrontation should be a nonviolent gesture of contempt for the Nixon administration.

Most delegates reached the convention without incident, but the South Carolina delegation bus was stalled in traffic about six blocks from the hall when demonstrators swarmed around it, slashing the tires with knives and cutting the radiator hose.

The delegates and alternates had to walk the rest of the way through the hooting, jeering crowds.

LeRoy Stocks, a delegate from Whiteville, N.C., said his group's bus got stalled in traffic and demonstrators slashed its tires, pounded in a door and ripped loose ignition wires.

"If they want to act like dogs, they should be treated like dogs," Stocks said. "I think next time they should issue every delegate and alternate and everybody else who wants one a submachine gun."

Buses carrying delegates and alternates from Tennessee, Ohio, Mississippi and Illinois were similarly disabled and their occupants forced to walk to the hall.

Democrats Form Public Alliance

McGovern Meets With Daley

CHICAGO (AP) — Sen. George S. McGovern and Mayor Richard J. Daley formed a public alliance Wednesday and pledged to coordinate their efforts to put, in Daley's words, "Illinois into the Democratic column in November."

The meeting between the Democratic mayor and the party's presidential candidate was the first since the Democratic National Convention in Miami Beach which evicted Daley and his Chicago delegates.

McGovern said, "I really very much wanted Daley... to be seated in Miami Beach. I hoped for some kind of a compromise."

But McGovern stressed that the problems with Daley were "past history" and that the meeting between the two leaders was aimed at "displaying a united front."

McGovern said at a news conference attended by both men that the luncheon session with Daley "was cordial and constructive."

Daley, in turn, promised that the Cook County Democratic organization would support the national ticket. He also said, "we're happy to have the next president in our headquarters."

Part of Daley's enthusiasm was attributed to McGovern's promise that he and his running mate, Sargent Shriver, "will visit Illinois several times before the election."

Daley became disenchanted in 1968 with the party's candidate, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, who made only three one-stop visits to Illinois during the campaign.

Humphrey lost the state to President Nixon by less than 150,000 votes.

McGovern said he and Daley talked at length and the mayor gave his suggestions about the campaign.

"Mayor Daley doesn't offer advice," McGovern said. "He offers suggestions which I find worth listening to."

Daley said his suggestions were ones "that you all know."

McGovern said, "We will work closely with Mayor Daley."

McGovern was asked if he had contacted the Rev. Jesse Jackson or Alderman William S. Singer, the two men who led the challenge which ousted Daley from the convention.

"No," the presidential candidate replied, "and I have no plans of doing so."

McGovern also said, "I have great affection for Mayor Daley."

In other developments the president of the Illinois AFL-CIO said Wednesday the union's national executive council may soon loosen its restrictions on presidential endorsements and clear the way for subordinate bodies to back Sen. George S. McGovern.

Stanley Johnson, president of the Illinois federation, said the council, which voted 27-3 last month to remain neutral in the presidential race, possibly will discuss the subject in Chicago next week.

"I doubt that the national AFL-CIO will change its stand of neutrality, but there may be some lessening of restrictions on local and state boards," Johnson said in an interview after speaking to members of the Association of Illinois Electric Cooperatives.

An AFL-CIO spokesman in Washington said the presidential endorsement issue was not expected to come up Monday or Tuesday, but that the meeting were to have "a wide and open agenda" and that any of the vice presidents could open the discussion.

Johnson said there has been considerable pressure exerted on AFL-CIO President George Meany to ease up on restrictions preventing the state federations from making a presidential endorsement.

Editorial Comment

Irresponsible Policy Meddling

Pierre Salinger's peace talks with the Communist negotiators in Paris compound the folly committed by Ramsey Clark in North Vietnam. As a responsible presidential candidate, Sen. McGovern has a clear duty to put an immediate end to this kind of intrusion on top-level national policy.

If the matter did not involve the fate of nations and the lives of many Americans, it could be likened to a sequence from Gilbert and Sullivan. Obviously some cues got badly crossed, and the question of to what extent Salinger was acting for McGovern is still not very clear. What Salinger heard from the Communists in Paris was also at variance with Clark's "intelligence" from Hanoi. Clark said he thought the North Vietnamese were about ready to release a few U.S. prisoners of war. Salinger said he was informed "there was no change in their position with regard to prisoners of war..."

None of this, of course, in any way improves the prospects for the release of the prisoners or for an earlier or more favorable end of the war. On the contrary, in view of McGovern's known advocacy of getting out on almost any terms, these direct dealings by McGovern men could conceivably help to persuade the Communists to hold out for a better deal in case McGovern gets elected.

McGovern said on Wednesday that "I would like to get our administration to make a peaceful settlement right now."

He can make a signal contribution toward that end whenever he chooses, and he has not yet so chosen.

As McGovern well knows, President Nixon is trying to bring the war to a quick end. Both he and the nation have everything to gain by it.

The negotiations are obviously at an extremely delicate stage right now. The last thing that's needed is interference from any outside quarter. Whether McGovern intends it or not, such interference tends to turn the whole desperate matter into a political game.

There is a clear line between such interference and legitimate, responsible debate on the Vietnam issue, and we regret that McGovern has not yet seen fit to draw it. He can challenge the administration's strategy, tactics, or wisdom in any way he chooses. He can say what he thinks has been done wrong and what he thinks he could do better. That's fair game. But he cannot validly demand that Mr. Nixon engage in public debate on the negotiations while they are going on. And he cannot legitimately play a hand, directly or through emissaries, in those negotiations. We urge him to bring this phase of his campaign back onto the track of responsibility by instructing his eager henchmen to quit trying to make foreign policy. The American people bestow that prerogative as they see fit, and the next time is November.

Copernicus In Orbit

From the very start it has appeared that one of the great boons of space development would be the chance for astronomers to peer at the universe from beyond Earth's atmosphere. This atmospheric envelope inhibits viewing and thus limits the visibility of the stars.

Experiment with small telescopes launched into space has proved the point. The astronomical observatory named Copernicus after the 15th century Polish genius of astronomy will greatly expand on it. This sophisticated package of instruments, weighing nearly two and one-half tons, will focus six telescopes on the heavens. One of them, 32 inches in diameter, is the largest ever sent into orbit.

Much has been learned through previous ventures along the same lines. More than 200 X-ray sources, suggestive of energies vaster than any previously thought possible, have been discovered. One 16-inch telescope orbited in 1968 is still transmitting valuable information. To all this will now be added the findings of the giant new Copernicus as its six telescopes study X-ray sources and the ultra-violet light of short-lived "hot" stars. This latest tool of astronomy is expected to contribute much to man's knowledge of the universe.

Nixon Sets Tone For Re-Election Strategy

Editor's Note: What course will President Nixon's re-election campaign follow? Gaylord Shaw, who covers the President, outlines the way that Nixon hopes will lead him to victory in November's presidential election.

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon, leaning over the wide desk in his White House office, set the tone for his re-election campaign strategy. "Regardless of what the polls show, whether we are ahead or behind, this will be a close, hard-fought election right down to the wire," he told a group of newsmen three weeks before his renomination at the Republican National Convention. "People who make predictions now could look very, very bad later. We are going to assume throughout this election that we have a very hard fight on our hands. ... We think it will be close and we hope to win." Translated, the message Nixon is flashing to his political lieutenants is this: We're running scared. We're ahead now, but we expect that lead to slip. We're taking nothing for granted.

The Nixon strategy is keyed to combining victory in large, electoral vote-rich states with sweeps in the smaller Midwest and Southern states.

If he carries four big states — California, New York, Texas and Illinois — Nixon will have more than half the electoral vote total he needs. But his advisers say he should run so well in the South and Midwest that he could afford to lose one or two of the bigger states and still ride to an easy victory.

Nixon himself has indicated to aides that he considers California crucial to his re-election chances. That is one reason Clark MacGregor has made two trips to California since taking over as campaign chief July 1.

The President won't campaign in all 50 states, but instead will concentrate on the larger states with fatter electoral vote prizes. Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, Cabinet members and other administration officials will carry the campaign load to smaller states.

Ten days before the GOP convention began, a Louis Harris poll showed Nixon with a 57-34 per cent lead over Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic nominee.

But this didn't budge the Nixon camp from its avowed caution.

"We were way ahead of Hubert Humphrey in '68, but we almost got beat," said one Republican strategist who, like most Nixon associates, remembers well the fast-closing Democratic campaign four years ago.

Nixon himself has decreed that he wants the campaign to be "a good, hard, clean fight on the issues."

A key factor in the decision to focus on the issues is the recognition that Nixon's policies seem more popular than Nixon the man.

"Let's face it," said one GOP strategist, "our man is not the political charmer that Eisenhower was."

But he ticked off polls which show strong public approval of Nixon's actions, especially in foreign affairs.

The centerpiece of the President's record is what Republicans view as Nixon-initiated steps toward a new era of peace. Specifically, the campaign will make heavy use of the President's break-through trip to China and his follow-up journey to the Soviet Union.

Democrats see Vietnam as a flaw in Nixon's image as a peacemaker. McGovern, in his early campaigning, criticized him for failing to keep his 1968 promise to end the war and he seemed to place Nixon spokesmen on the defensive.

The campaign plea for understanding on Vietnam likely will be coupled with a sharp attack on those, McGovern especially, whose statements on Vietnam are viewed by Republicans as undercutting Nixon's negotiating position.

Even before Nixon's formal renomination, the President's forces were striving to put McGovern on the defensive over his economic proposals.

In a harbinger of full-fledged campaign attacks, MacGregor resurrected McGovern's $1,000 per person income grant suggestion and charged it "would split America permanently into a welfare class and a working class."

Nixon is expected to charge that McGovern's economic proposals would result in massive tax increases or require major, inflation-spurring budget deficits.

At the same time, Nixon will recite favorable economic indicators to contend that his administration is winning the war against inflation.

Nixon also has signaled his intention to make a campaign issue of the Democratic-controlled Congress' lack of action on major administration proposals such as welfare reform and of its tendency to vote more funds than he requested.

One Republican goal is to give Nixon a "more tractable Congress" if he wins a second term. As part of this effort, the campaign's radio-television advertising budget was cut by $3.5 million a few weeks before the convention and the money shifted to grass roots organizing where it can have more impact on congressional races.

Nixon is likely to make some weekend campaign trips near the end of September but probably will do little full-time campaigning until after Congress adjourns in the fall.

Meanwhile, he will be tending to his White House duties.

$100 Billion U.S. Budget Hike Seen

By BRUCE BIOSSAT
WASHINGTON (NEA)—In the next presidential term, the federal budget is going to rise at least $100 billion above present annual levels. It therefore takes a good deal of sheer nerve for any politician to talk these days about "tax relief." The real likelihood is higher taxes. Even before Congress added $8.4 billion to yearly federal outlays by enacting a 20 per cent Social Security benefit increase, the Brookings Institution's new budget study had projected U.S. budget hikes totaling $91 billion between now and fiscal 1977.

The future figures could go considerably higher if Congress continues its present course of enlarging major appropriations affecting social programs. Nearly $2 billion has been added by Congress to President Nixon's budget request for HEW funds this fiscal year.

The President's veto, of course, could put a damper on some of this expansion.

The Brookings budget review indicates that inflation will add $9 billion a year to the budget, representing higher federal workers' wages and higher prices for the things the government buys.

There are built-in escalators. More and more beneficiaries are coming under education, health, welfare and other programs. An automatic cost-of-living booster is contained in some, and now will be part of the Social Security system. Brookings figured the escalators as adding perhaps $6 billion a year to the budget, not counting the new Social Security features.

It is estimated that as environmental agencies develop, federal pollution-fighting costs may take $4 billion a year.

The Social Security legislation adopted this summer provides some, but not a lot of, offsetting revenue gains. The payroll tax rate goes up a little next year, and the income base from which those taxes are taken will be widened in 1973, in 1974, and probably often thereafter.

Nevertheless, there is no real treasure trove to tap to cover the full range of enlarging expenditures. These will more than use up the so-called fiscal dividend, the tax revenue gain that accompanies general economic growth. That dividend has largely vanished. The reason, says the Brookings report:

"... In the space of 13 short years, federal civilian expenditures as a percentage of GNP (the nation's total output) almost doubled; even if no new programs are added, the annual growth in existing expenditure programs now absorbs a much larger fraction of the growth in revenues than was the case 10 years ago."

Notwithstanding these difficulties, politicians in both major parties keep suggesting that no new tax increases will have to be voted in the next year or two. The Democrats talk often of "tax reform," knowing full well that the expression is read by many voters as a cut in taxes.

The tax experts do indeed agree that the tax system is loaded with inequities—that the payroll tax falls with extra weight on lower income workers, some privileged people enjoy tax preferences (loopholes), the property tax is a jerry-built monstrosity.

But, realistically, there can be no reforms which amount to general tax cuts. Since 1964, Congress has enacted tax reductions depriving the U.S. treasury today of some $45 billion yearly. The trend now surely is going to be the other way—to get it back, and more.

Ann Landers:

Verse Explains Recipe Failures

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed a letter from a woman who was furious because her "best friend" had given her a recipe that called for $4 worth of ingredients and the casserole was a failure. She considered it a crummy trick and said, "If a person doesn't want to give a recipe, she should say so and not phony up something that is sure to fail."

I ran across a verse that I'd like to dedicate to "Betrayed in Birmingham":

She didn't have potatoes
So she used a cup of rice.
She couldn't find paprika
So she used some other spice.
Tomatoes weren't in season,
So she used tomato paste.
The WHOLE can, not a cup,
dear—

She couldn't bear to waste.
And now she isn't speaking;
She's convinced I pulled a fast one.

So don't ask for my recipe,
That one was the last one.

Dear Friend: Women who give recipes should attach a note: "No substitution or this recipe could be injurious to our friendship."

Dear Ann Landers: For several years I worked in an immaculate and well-equipped place. I decided to change jobs (better benefits). On the first day I was shocked by the dirt and the condition of the equipment. After a month I couldn't stand it so I returned to my original place of employment.

Two years later another opportunity opened up. I applied and was pleased with the beautiful offices where I filled out the forms. It never occurred to me to look at the shop. On the following Monday I was amazed to discover that I had signed up for Pig Pen Number Two.

I was ashamed to ask for my old job back so I stayed on. Three years later I was promoted to a satellite plant 25 miles away. Would you believe Pig Pen Number Three?

My question is this: Should a boss offer to show a prospective employee the area where he will be working or should the applicant ask to see it?—Mr. Clean

Dear Mr. C.: If the boss does not offer to show a prospective employee the working area, the applicant should ask to see it. This isn't bad manners, it's common sense. No employer should be offended by such a request.

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married seven years to a swell guy who says he loves me more than anything in the world and I believe him. I have no evidence that he has ever cheated on me. In fact, I would never give it a thought except for one thing. I keep finding names, addresses and telephone numbers in his pockets. When I ask him what gives, he says, "Oh that. The guys at the plant keep offering to fix me up and I don't want to hurt their feelings by telling them I'm not interested." Then he throws the slips away. What do you make of it?—Ifly Sue

Dear Ifly: Tell your husband you trust him completely, but when you find slips of paper in his pockets with names and numbers it upsets you and that he should be more concerned about YOUR feelings than the feelings of the guys at the plant.

Probe Drowning At Beardstown

BEARDSTOWN — Authorities continued their investigation into the death of a 13 year old Springfield boy here this weekend.

It has been revealed that Robert Bryden, whose body was recovered from Myers Pond near the Beardstown Marina, may have been unconscious before entering the water.

There has been no conclusive pathological evidence to substantiate the belief, however. Investigating officers also said they were puzzled about the fact that the boy was wearing a life belt, and that he was a good swimmer. His body was found in about three feet of water by his father Howarth O. Bryden Saturday morning several hours after a search was started.

The family often spent weekends here and the youngster and his father went fishing Friday afternoon. The boy was last seen alive about 4 p.m. after the fishing trip.

Passavant Wants Maximum Care With Economy

Trustees of the Passavant hospital system are continuing their study of ways to modernize local health care services and control costs by complete utilization of buildings, equipment, and staff.

"Our first concern must be the quality of care," board president Clarendon Smith told the trustees at an Aug. 21 meeting. "We must deliver excellent service to every patient, whether he needs acute care, emergency care, surgery, or long-term skilled nursing care."

Architects recently surveyed the Norris unit to determine which hospital services can be housed there for maximum efficiency and economy.

Administrator William R. Mitchell said his staff is making a comprehensive study of needs, facilities, and costs and will make a recommendation to the board soon about additional uses for the Norris unit.

In other action, the board approved a resolution honoring the memory of the late Dr. Warner Newcomb for his services to the hospital. Purchase of new x-ray equipment also was authorized, at a cost of $10,105.

July in "Black"

Mr. Mitchell reported the hospital operated in the black during July.

A new public information service, Communi-Quick, started several weeks ago, enables area residents to get quick answers to questions about hospital service and operation.

"We hope more people will call on Thursday mornings between 10 and 11 a.m.," Mitchell said, "when they can talk directly with a member of the administrative staff. All they have to do is dial 245-9541 and ask for Communi-Quick."

Mrs. Dean Floeth, Aid Society president, said the gift shop at Passavant will reopen Monday following remodeling. The Society's annual Flea Market will be Oct. 13.

Trustees present included Henry Aldridge, William Davidsmeyer, Russell Hubbard, Robert Bradney, Mrs. William Young, Arthur Lauff, Joseph Whalen, Larry Flynn, Herman Brown, William Chipman, Paul Nickel, Lew Cummings, Cary Strang, and Marvin Martin.

DEAR POLLY—I can sympathize with Mrs. C.W. who finds shopping with a baby and a toddler a real problem as I have a six-month-old baby and a four-year-old. ## Woman Only Second Presbyterian Pastor

By WALT SMITH
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI)—When Betty Blanton graduated from theological seminary, she never dreamed she would become only the second woman in the 111-year history of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. to become sole pastor of a church.

At the age of 42, Mrs. Blanton enrolled in the seminary to prepare herself for a worthwhile career. Her husband was dying of cancer.

After 20 enjoyable years as a housewife, she decided she would like to work with young people within the church. But she felt the time was not right for a woman to be sole pastor of a church.

"I was just utterly flabbergasted," she said of her call recently to become pastor of the Jacksonville Trinity Presbyterian Church. "I had resigned myself that this would never happen in my generation."

"I thought that it would happen with the next wave of women coming out of seminary, but I never expected it to happen so soon," she said. "I was thrilled to death."

She is Called

Mrs. Blanton was serving as assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Gainesville when the pulp committee of the 100-member Trinity congregation asked her to become their pastor.

"I told them I wouldn't consider it unless the congregation had the opportunity to see me and hear me preach before they voted on it," she recalled.

The attractive, gray-haired minister said there were only five people out of the 1,600-member Gainesville congregation who had objected to a woman serving as assistant pastor.

"They wouldn't even come when I would preach," she recalled. "But five out of 1,600 ain't a bad batting average."

Mrs. Blanton said she has had no problems thus far, but that the biggest difficulty might come in "evoking confidence in men so they could come to see me as a counselor."

Jealousy No Problem

The 51-year-old minister sees no problems with jealousy among the women in her congregation. "At my age, I don't think so," she said. "If I was younger, it might be a problem, but I'm not much of a threat."

Mrs. Blanton said she feels women have a great deal to give to the ministry.

"I don't say we have more to give than men do, but we have, perhaps, something different to give. I think the ideal situation would be to have a man and a woman serve a church. People have different talents—preaching or counseling or teaching or administration—but the difference really depends on the individual, not on the individual's sex."

Although she says she is not a "demonstrator," Mrs. Blanton is interested in the women's rights movement, especially as it concerns equal pay and equal opportunity for advancement among professional people.

She is also a member of the clergy consultation service—an organization where pregnant women can go for counseling and advice on the possibility of obtaining an abortion.

"We never recommend an abortion," said Mrs. Blanton. "We have the person look at the alternative solutions. But if she chooses abortion, we refer her to a respectable agency."

She said the service tries to provide real counseling "rather than just having her go to some agency and have an abortion and not be able to get herself together psychologically."

Betty Canary Expectations You Can't Live Up To

One can easily tell if a mother is a pessimist or an optimist. The optimist says, "I found an extra sock in the laundry today." The pessimist says, "Somebody has a sock missing."

Personally, I tend to see myself as the optimistic type. But there are times, oh, there are times, when a set smile is all a woman can manage.

A set smile is for those days when your child compares you with his friend's mother. The day, for example, when you have worked for hours on a poem, one you are sure good enough for your favorite literary quarterly. And your child picks that time to ask, "Why don't you make sugar cookies on Thursday the way Mary's mother does?"

And what about the day you worked on a gourmet recipe, finally ladled it up into your best antique Limoge plates, placed it on your best cloth and expected applause while you lit the candles?

Of course. That's when your son says, "Why do we always have to mess around like this? Jimmy's family gets to eat off paper plates in the backyard every night!"

If you're a seamstress who saves a pretty penny by sewing your daughter's clothes, then surely she has said to you (and probably it was on the day you conquered that complicated designer original pattern), "Oh, mother. Why does everything I wear have to be homemade?"

You aren't a seamstress? Then you're a woman whose daughter says, "All I have are tacky things. Arlene has tons of darling outfits because her mother sews."

I've yet to meet a woman who lives up to the expectations of her children. If she's a pro swimmer or a track star, her children would prefer someone who didn't "look so muscular."

If she's the pretty-flower-lolling-in-the-backyard type, her kids moan that their friends all have mothers who can play basketball.

In the end, however, everything does balance out. In the middle of the night, when Susie has a headache and Johnny coughs, they never call for Arlene's or Jimmy's mother.

Starts Wed. - Open Thurs. & Fri. Evenings till 9 P.M.

Area Teachers Attend IVHETA Conference

The 39th annual In-Service IVHETA Conference, involving approximately 800 home economists, was held August 16-18 at the Palmer House in Chicago. This year's conference theme was "Key for '72—Priorities." This theme underlined a concerted effort to help teachers anticipate changes and become actively involved in promoting and influencing those changes which are most likely to improve the quality of life for individuals and families in coming years, according to IVHETA President, Mrs. Bessie Hackett of Normal, who teaches at Illinois State University.

Prominent guest speakers included Mary C. Manning, Regional Director of Women's Bureau, U.S. Department of Labor; and Linda Lucht, Field Home Economist for J.C. Penney Company, Inc., as well as many of IVHETA's own outstanding leaders in home economics. Other well known speakers were from education, Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, National Restaurant Association, Chicago Department of Police, Public Health, Al-Anon, and other related fields.

Jacksonville High School teacher Mrs. Audra Taylor was among conference participants. Others attending from this area included Mrs. Dorothy Smith of Virginia, Mrs. Virginia Boyle of Ashland, Miss Peggy Pickens of Waverly, Mrs. Esta Newman of Bluffs, Mrs. Helen Winkelman of Triopia and Mrs. Gladys Frye of Mt. Sterling.

Mitchum Rated One Of Best, Most Dependable Film Actors

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Remember when Robert Mitchum was one of the bad boys of Hollywood?

There was a time when the big handsome actor seemed to be involved in more romantic and fistic misadventures off the screen than on it. Some of his critics predicted he was too boisterous to last as a star. But time has calmed him and now that he has made some 61 pictures in nearly 30 years—his latest is "Wrath of God"—he has become one of the most durable box-office names in the industry.

Directors rate him as one of the best and most dependable actors in films. But Bob himself, who once worked in an aircraft factory, still talks as if he regarded acting as a temporary source of livelihood. "This business has robbed me of my initiative," he said, smiling. "It's so easy to do. There are only two hard things about it—wiping off the makeup at the end of the day and putting on and pulling off your boots while you're making a Western."

But Mitchum, despite a lifelong skepticism of people and their professed motives, is no goldbrick. On the set he is known as a hard and conscientious worker.

"I take life myself pretty much as it does. I've never been bored. I could sit in a closet and be pleased. I like the day as it comes."

Mitchum has pretty well lived down the public's image of him as a heavy-drinking, tough playboy.

"I don't know what my public image is—there have been so many versions," he remarked. "Worrying about that could drive you into schizophrenia. But I think the most dangerous thing for an actor to do is to try to live up to any public image of him."

"My friends say I've changed over the last 25 years. I haven't. I have kept the same values. The best value, I think, is honesty. You always have to keep searching yourself to see whether your motives are clear—or whether you're kidding yourself."

Here are the things Mitchum likes: "Any excellence in any field—early morning, because it stands for another chance—autumn—soft moans—true self-possession—ham hocks, steak and kidney pie—milk—leather and stable smells—feminine scents—good relations with women, and I've always had them."

And here are his dislikes: "Poseurs (half the people in the world are faking it)—the roar of the city with everyone talking at once—overpowering perfumes—joiners (if you have to be 50 people to be one man, better back up and try again)—self-pretense in women—creamed foods—and exotic drinks that make you blow your nose in a canoe."

What would Bob Mitchum

like to be on his 75th birthday? "Quietly forgotten," he answered. "I don't think I can hack it that long. No way. I'm still in a state of shock that I even made 30."

Laws Of Maritime Salvage Apply To Nation's Rivers

By JACK WOLISTON.
NEW YORK (UPI)—From the ditty bag:

A judge in Pittsburgh ruled recently, on the basis of a U.S. Justice Department opinion, that the laws of maritime salvage apply to the nation's rivers "as far as they are navigable." He dismissed large charges against three men arrested while trying to tow an abandoned pleasure boat ashore from the Ohio River. The three told police they were salvaging the boat under maritime law.

Residents of Fire Island, the long strip of land that separates Great South Bay from the Atlantic Ocean off New York's Long Island, are enjoying the services of a "Boat Bank" for the second consecutive summer. The floating branch of Security National Bank of Hempstead, N.Y., a converted 34-foot Chris Craft Aqua Home, visits three of the island's more populous communities on a six-day-a-week schedule. Business is transacted at a portside walk-up window.

Sponsors of the International Fireball World Championship, to be held Sept. 23-29 at Wrightsville Beach, Del., report a large number of entries to date, among them entries from Iceland, England and Australia.

The World Championships will be limited to 50 boats, but the North American Open Championship regatta, Sept. 20-22, to be sailed over the same course, will be open to all. Facilities of the Carolina Yacht Club will be used for both events.

Sailboat races and water skiing demonstrations highlighted the recent dedication of the Stockton Dam and Reservoir in southwest Missouri. Stockton Lake, formed by impounding the Little Sac and Big Sac Rivers, has a shoreline of 298 miles and 24,900 surface acres. All types of boating are permitted and a new lake already has gained a reputation as a fishing "hot spot" for bass and walleye.

Herbert H. McSorley of Oosterville, Mass., an enforcement officer with the Massachusetts Department of Marine and Recreation, has won the 10th annual Safe Boating Award sponsored by the New England Marine Trade Association. McSorley was cited for conducting off-season boating classes for more than 1,700 school children in six communities during the past school year. Two McSorley graduates, aged 13 and 14, subsequently saved the life of a boatowner stricken with a heart attack while taking the boys on a cruise.

Officials estimate that 250,000 persons, packed on the New Jersey shore and aboard a flotilla of 4,000 spectator boats, watched the recent Hennessy Grand Prix, the 181.3-mile offshore powerboat race that includes a 50-mile leg of open ocean from Point Pleasant, N.J., to Fire Island Inlet, Sandy, Saulto of Cleveland, Ohio, won the event, averaging 72 miles per hour.

Shipments of new recreational boats, motors and boat trailers soared to new heights for the first eight months of the 1972 model year, according to a recent survey. Retail value of the products was set at $853 million, up 38.2 per cent from the same period a year ago.

CEMETERY AT MANCHESTER GETS NEEDED CLEANUP

MANCHESTER — The committee for the new Manchester cemetery, due to requests from several interested persons, decided to clean off the brush, trees, and litter around the cemetery.

They secured a large bulldozer which operated about three days. The ground has been seeded and the unplotted west part has been mowed. This has greatly improved the appearance of the cemetery.

The committee is receiving congratulations on a project well done.

Contributions from those interested in the cemetery are now being made to Mrs. Lucille Cooper, Manchester, 62663, for the work done and continued maintenance.

Villages In The Mani Dying For Inhabitants

By JOHN N. RIGOS

PORTO KAYO, Mani, Greece (UPI)—The only way to get to this fishing village, with its stone houses dotted over various levels of the landscape, is to sail up the two-mile long narrow bay, flanked by barren mountains.

Like so many villages in the Mani, a 30-mile rugged peninsula in southern Greece, it is dying for want of inhabitants.

Panoyotis Kassis, his wife Pagona and their 20-year-old daughter Koula live in a house at the end of the village. George Kalimeria and his wife Maria tend the "shop" with its few tinned and packeted provisions, operate the telephone and do a little fishing on the side.

All the other houses in the area are empty. Over the years their owners have gone to live in other parts of the country or abroad where they could make a more lucrative living.

Kassis, a 55-year old lean man with weathered skin, said he was glad I came. "It makes us feel there are a few more people in the world."

He is by trade a fisherman, dropping his lines in the Aegean at night.

"If the bait is good—I use mainly squid and small fish—the catch next morning can be between 44 and 220 pounds, mostly snapper and red mullet," he said.

Reading the Catch
As soon as he brings his catch in from sea, Kassis boxes them ready for market in a storeroom on the beach where he has a large icebox.

"Twice a week I take my fish to a fishmonger up in Gythion, about 30 miles from here. It takes five hours to sail there but 'Holy Trinity' never lets me down," he said, banging the side of his caique.

His wife and daughter always go with him to Gythion. "We arrive in time for a stroll in the square and a movie, spend the night on the boat and after shopping the next morning we arrive home in the afternoon," Koula Kassis said, sitting on the beach wearing a knee-length dress over slacks.

When the weather is bad Kassis drops his nets in the bay. "We don't catch fish good enough to sell, but it makes good enough soup for us and our neighbors," he said.

"For leisure, we sit at the table with a glass of wine, talking, listening to the radio. We have no newspapers, no television. Things haven't changed here in decades, except that all the others have gone," said the fisherman as he fiddled with his nets.

"From the radio we hear what is going on in the rest of the world, what's going on in Greece. We might comment to each other, but none of it affects us down here."

Daughter May Leave
A small boat from Athens' port of Piraeus comes to Porto Kayo once a week, bringing mail and the occasional visitor.

"We have no road to connect us with the rest of Greece. The mountains are too difficult to cross regularly, so like islanders we depend on the ship," Kassis said.

In the summer a few former villagers come back for vacations "but in the winter it's tough. We are really alone, but what can we do? I've lived here all my life and I like it here."

"It is lonely," said his daughter. "For the time being it is our life, but one day I will leave them, too."

"My father has bought an apartment for me in Athens. It's my dowry. When I marry I will go there," she said. "I would like to stay here, but can you think of anyone who would want to come and join me?"

THE DOCTOR SAYS

But Most Of Body Does

Nerves Don't Regenerate

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.
Dear Dr. Lamb—I am a high school student and at school one of the things we learned is that you will have a new body every seven years, because the body gradually builds new cells to replace the old ones each day of our lives.

I am a teen-ager who has had a very hard time with my nerves for the past three years. My question is when the new nerve cells replace my old ones, am I likely to be in a better shape or just as bad as I am now?

Dear Reader—You must be a good student. The question is one of the interesting things about living cells. Many of them have the capacity to replace themselves continuously. As long as this continues a state of youth is maintained. If Nature's secrets can be learned to the point that we understand what causes cells to constantly replace themselves and then what causes them to stop doing this, resulting in old age, we may be able to actually prevent aging and preserve constant youth.

In the meantime, I would like to encourage you by saying that many younger people who are nervous during their teen-age and maturation years gradually become more secure about themselves and the world. With this they gain self-confidence and feel better. In other words even though you still have the same nerve cells, you learn to function better and consequently you do better.

Women who are using an intrauterine device (IUD) for birth control may be interested in a recent study from Denmark which reported that the device increased menstrual bleeding. The increased bleeding during the menses persisted through at last six months of the study. The increased loss of blood contributed to an increase in anemia. It is known that menstruating women commonly need more iron because of their blood loss than they do in the other periods of their life or than men require. This study would suggest that women who are using the IUD ought to be particularly conscientious about having medical checkups and ought to be particularly careful about their iron intake.

In Hollywood

BY BOB THOMAS

Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — What will you be seeing in prime-time television when the new season starts next month?

More action and adventure, blockbuster films and original movies; less comedy and variety; and very little news.

The three networks already are displaying the "promos" or station-break commercials that herald the attractions of the new season. These teasers make the new series look so good that a wag has suggested that the networks cancel the series and play only the promos.

Alas, the product is not always as good as the ads. The programming that prevails will probably reflect the mixture as before. In fact, Variety has already tagged the 1972-83 season "Son of Last Year."

The three networks have scheduled the new season pretty much in character. CBS, which has remained No. 1 in ratings with the help of its situation comedies, will offer 11 who are using the IUD ought to be particularly conscientious about having medical checkups and ought to be particularly careful about their iron intake.

NBC, which believes firmly in the long form, will be presenting more 90-minute and two-hour dramas. ABC, which as the No. 3 network must try harder, continues to be more adventurous in its programming, with such a departure as pro football in prime time.

All three networks have an impressive bag of theatrical films to offer. ABC paid many millions for "True Grit," "Patton," "Lawrence of Arabia," "Goldfinger," "The Odd Couple," "Dr. Doolittle" and "Z."

NBC's movies include "In the Heat of the Night," "The Anderson Tapes," "The Andromeda Strain," "Marooned," "The Green Berets," "Cactus Flower" and "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World."

CBS has "Around the World in 80 Days," "The Dirty Dozen," "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" (the musical version) and "Oklahoma!"

Most of these blockbusters will be presented early in the season. The strategy is obvious: The networks want to amass big ratings at the start of the rating race and hamper the regular programming of the opposition.

This is likely to be the last season of the blockbuster films on television. Nearly all have now been sold to the networks, and the film studios simply aren't making them any more. Besides, the networks have found that ratings with made-for-TV movies can be as good or better than the high-priced theatrical films.

All three networks have proclaimed that their 1972-73 schedules are well balanced. But Variety points out that most are designed to entertain. Less than one of the 63 hours has the purpose to inform. Among the more promising of the new shows: a variety hour starring Julie Andrews (ABC); Yul Brynner in "Anna and the King" (CBS); a lauded version of "MASH" (CBS); an added starter to NBC's Mystery Movie starring Richard Boone; George Peppard in "Banacek," and a situation comedy with Paul Lynde (ABC).

Into an electric blender turn all the ingredients except the chives, in order listed, and blend until liquefied and smooth. It probably will be necessary to turn blender off and on several times and to scrape down and mix mixture. Refrigerate for several hours or overnight to chill and thicken spread. Just before serving add minced chives to as much of the spread as will be used immediately. Serve as low-calorie spread with baked potatoes. Plain spread may be stored in refrigerator about a week and used (without adding chives) with fruit or blintzes. Makes 1 to 1 1/4 cups.

Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH
AP Photos

Recent photos of Great Britain's royal family are the basic designs of a new set of stamps from the Channel Island of Jersey. The special stamp issue will commemorate the silver wedding anniversary of Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip.

The 2½ pence shows Princess Anne. The 3 pence features Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip. The 7½ pence depicts Prince Charles. The 20 pence bears a family group picture of Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip, Prince Charles, Princess Anne, Prince Edward and Prince Andrew.

Jersey, now completing its third year as an independent postal authority, is proud that it has an older relationship with the British crown than any other part of the British Isles. It had been part of the realm of the Dukes of Normandy before Duke William conquered England in 1066 and was crowned King William I.

Collectors of U.S. stamps who are keeping up with their first day issuances are reminded of the following schedule: Sept. 15—8-cent Parent-Teachers Association stamp in San Francisco; Sept. 20—8-cent Block of Four in Warm Springs, Ore.; Sept. 27—8-cent Mail Order stamp in Chicago; Oct. 9—8-cent Osteopathic Medicine commemorative in Miami, Fla.; Oct. 13—8-cent Tom Sawyer stamp in Hannibal, Mo.; Oct. 20—7-cent Benjamin Franklin in Philadelphia; Nov. 10—8-cent Pharmacists of America in Cincinnati. No details yet on the 1972 Christmas stamp, or stamps.

The 8-cent commemorating osteopathic medicine on Oct. 9 coincides with the convention of the American Osteopathic Assn. to be held in Miami. This stamp continues the "partners in health" related stamps. The Pharmacy stamp scheduled for Nov. 10 is also part of this series.

First day cancellation requests should be sent to "Osteopathic Medicine Stamp," Postmaster, Miami, Fla. 33101, enclosing the proper remittance and postmarked no later than Oct. 9.

The United Nations will issue two new commemoratives Sept. 11 for the 25th anniversary of Economic Commission for Europe. The stamps of the same design will have simultaneous issuances in New York and Geneva.

The Economic Commission for Europe was established in 1947 to help reconstruct a war-torn continent and strengthen the economic relations of the European countries among themselves and other countries of the world.

In 1919 the U.N. also issued a stamp for the ECE. This was a 4-cent.

The design of the new commemorative features a symbolic flower. Each petal in hexagonal form contains one of the letters of the word "Europe."

"Scenes of Tunisian Life," the third such set to be issued by Tunisia on this subject, have just been released, reports the World Wide Philatelic Agency. Last year's set showed such mercantile activities as pottery selling, fabric dying, vending hats, etc. This year's stamps highlight music and dance.

These stamps, as well as all mentioned in this column, are available at your local stamp dealer or stamp department.

Was Mickey Mouse Imperialist Agent?

By ERNEST SAKLER

ROME (UPI)—Ever heard about comics, Italian style? They are booming, almost as much of a hit as spaghetti westerns, in this country at least. The humor in some of them seems too Italian for export.

With children and adults alike gobbling up comic strips and newspapers which once blasted Mickey Mouse as an imperialist agent are now running Peanuts and Blondie strips, Italian artists have come to realize that there is money in the comics business. And fun.

The first ones to enter the market—and they are still there and making money—were not very imaginative. Those who did not use animal characters as poor replicas of Mickey Mouse dished out improbable westerns with teen-aged rangers, cowless cowboys and good Indians chasing Chinese slave dealers up the rivers of Texas, ballooning around with English Lords or being hypnotized stiff by East Indian fakirs in Arizona.

Ghosting For Disney Another successful line was ghosting for Walt Disney Productions. A majority of Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck stories now being published under license in Italy are the work of Italians. Some of them are sharply Italian-angled but publishers say others have been good enough to draw letters of praise from Walt Disney Productions.

Little by little, some of the better Italian artists entered the comics field. Even novelist Dino Buzzati, referred to by some as "the Italian Franz Kafka," used the technique in "Comics Poem," a hard cover book he published in 1969 shortly before his death.

That, admittedly, was meant as art and not for the broad public. Buzzati, a painter in his spare time, impressively combined design and words in a tale of sex and death, a modern version of the myth of Orpheus and Eurydice.

On a more down-to-earth level, commercial comics produced things that were almost as good.

An obviously antiwar cartoonist who uses the name "Bonvi" achieved the unlikely result of making Nazi soldiers likable in a strip titled "Sturmtruppen." It shows them victims of all sorts of surrealistic misfortunes ranging from the macabre to the bawdy to plain nonsense such as a sentry on a dark night meeting Snow White and the seven dwarfs and wondering: "How am I ever going to report this to headquarters?"

Sexy Valentina Enzo Lunari toys around with cavemen and mammoths in a series somewhat reminiscent of the Johnny Hart strip "B.C." Guido Crepax produces one of the sexiest strips, about a girl named Valentina who is seen mostly in the nude and has a split personality.

Among the favorites of youngsters is the designer-writer team of Magnus and Bunker (real names Roberto Raviola of Bologna and Luciano Secchi of Milan, both 33). They started out with a series about a character named "Kriminal," a handsome masked robber and killer who is a sort of Batman in reverse.

IF YOU ARE BORED with things and are looking for something that will keep both hands—as well as mouth—busy, then maybe you should take up a musical skill, such as double horn playing. Charles Lewis, a 25-year-old General Motors assembly line inspector from Flint, Mich., plays both a eluge horn (right hand) and a trumpet (left hand) at the same time—each in a different key! Charles and five friends, also from Flint, play in a traveling band touring northern Michigan resort towns. (UPI Photo)

Then Magnus and Bunker went into the humorous field and came up with a delightful series named "Alan Ford," about a farcical team of secret agents who include the handsome but bashful and naive Alan Ford, a thieving self-styled count, a small, big-nosed grumbler and others, none of them above stealing a chicken for lunch. "Number One" is a white-bearded invalid in a wheelchair who keeps telling unending tales about his past feasts with sidekicks ranging from George Washington to King Agamemnon.

All for Fun All of the series is fun, although some of it disguises

(or toys with) social protest. Bosses are arrogant and greedy and there are such characters as an alcoholic Superman who steals from the poor to give to the rich.

In one scene, furniture movers for some reason deliver a huge refrigerator to a slum family. When they dump the refrigerator in the kitchen upside down, angry because they have not been tipped, an admiring mother tells her children:

"See, this is the compartment for butter. This is for eggs..."

Blue Jeans, Sports Shirt Accepted Traveling Attire

By WALTER LOGAN

PARIS (UPI)—The odd thing about travel these days is that men flying first class are apt to turn up in blue jeans and sports shirts while those back in tourist class may be wearing coats and ties and suffering from their formality.

In the olden days when world travel was an unheard of luxury for the masses the gentry would set forth aboard an ocean liner laden with bags, trunks, valises and likely as not a covey of servants to wrestle them up and down the gangplanks.

They put on their tweedy country clothes for early morning strolls around the deck, maybe something more formal later for afternoon tea on the verandah deck and then at night into their tuxedos, or in extreme cases, white tie and tails.

Now it's the age of the jet and every Tom, Dick and Harry is flying the Atlantic with his wife and children unless they are teen-age children. If they are teen-agers they are off on some cut rate flight of their own in some of the scruffiest clothes this side of New York's East Village, which is even scruffier than Greenwich Village.

Casual Rich On a flight to Athens the other day there was sitting in first class a couple from Canada. Both were wearing grimy canvas sneakers with no socks and both were wearing blue jeans. He was wearing a sports shirt with fake shoulder padding like a rugby player. As they dabbled with the Iranian caviar and Strasbourg pate de foie gras between sips of vintage champagne they discussed a length a forthcoming cruise through the Greek Islands and whether the crew had got their yacht safely across the Atlantic in time to meet them at Piraeus.

And then there was a French couple taking off for New York. She was in a pants suit, of course, but he was something else: A pair of white goatskin loafers with Gucci's red and green scurling and gold snaffle bit, faded denim pants and a white silk shirt unbuttoned to the navel in best European tradition.

You could tell the Americans at any airport you visited—all the men were wearing knits. Not all of them were wearing coats and ties but all of them were wearing knits. There were knit suits, knit slacks and knit shirts, mostly in loud colors.

You could also pick out Americans at various beach resorts around the Mediterranean. The women wore bikinis and were undistinguishable from Europeans. But the American men all wore boxer-type swimming trunks to the knees while the European men wore practically nothing and ran about kicking soccer balls with the side of their feet.

Another difference could be noticed in the cities. American men ventured forth in seersucker and cord suits in light colors while the Europeans wore dark colors and narrow ties. Elderly

German men at a few posh luxury hotels always seemed to wear one-inch-wide black ties.

Distinctive Sports Shirts The wearing of the sports shirt was another characteristic that set apart the Americans. The ones seen on Americans were mostly long sleeved and in reasonably bright printed florals, gingham checks and Hawaiian prints. Europeans ran to thin, printed silk-like shirts, dark, and open as always as far as they would open.

And a footnote on the wearing of knits for travel: They were comfortable and you could sleep in them easily if you can sleep aboard planes. They did not wrinkle, they did not crease. They looked perfectly fresh the next day after being slept in and then hung on a hanger. But they were hot when the weather was hot and they were always getting little snags, snipped off with a pair of scissors from time to time while one wondered if the whole thing would unravel. It did not.

Copernicus also will examine ultraviolet light from young hot stars which live quickly by astronomical standards. Their life spans are measured in millions of years and during the 20 billion year age of our galaxy many generations of these stars have come and gone.

The satellite also carries three telescopes designed by University College of London to investigate X-rays emitted from celestial objects. These sources give off so much energy that scientists think they have energy processes heretofore thought impossible.

There Are Weddings And Then More Weddings

The end is the same: a marriage. But the means vary. Presbyterian minister Rev. C. Mason Harvey, above, administers the marital rites to 75 couples at once in a corral at Synanon Ranch in California, a center for recovered drug addicts. Below, Princess Chantal and her father, Prince Henri, the Count of Paris, arrive at the Royal Chapel of Dreux, France, for the princess' marriage to Baron Francois Xavier de Sambucy de Sorgue.

Calligraphy Master Once Had Sloppy Handwriting

By A. RAYNER MORTON

Associated Press Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Oregon's calligrapher laureate once had trouble with his handwriting.

As a professor at Reed College, where he taught graphic arts and humanities for 30 years, Lloyd Reynolds saw examples of early manuscripts in art history books.

If they could do it, he thought to himself, I can. So he taught himself to write in Italic script.

When his students saw the new penmanship they wanted to learn.

"I never intended to teach calligraphy," Reynolds says. Yet he has led thousands of students—young and old—to an awareness of the great letter forms of the past and to the mastery of the craft of calligraphy.

Now some 70 elementary and high school art teachers in Portland are handing down the skills for clean, simple, attractive handwriting.

"It's not just handwriting," Reynolds clarifies. "It opens up a whole new field of culture through something which was a bore and a chore."

He says he believes calligraphy has an important place in the educational process.

Youngsters are enthusiastic about calligraphy classes, he said.

"Principals say they are opposed to offering calligraphy courses because they don't think 10 kids will sign up—and 250 do."

Teachers say children learning Italic find they have something to say, become interested in writing, and develop into better students in other fields.

Growth of calligraphy in the school system would have been faster, Reynolds says, except for departmental insistence on specialization.

"It's still considered an art project," he said. "Teachers don't take it seriously. They still insist on clean cut divisions between English composition and art."

Nevertheless, Reynolds said, he thinks a national movement toward the study of calligraphy in the educational system is on its way.

"Italic with its rich human cultural background is relevant to the child's urgent needs," Reynolds has said. "Skill in writing it would help give him the identity and self-confidence he seeks so desperately to find in an increasingly mechanistic, computerized, automated, impersonal society."

Values of Italic script are not confined to the educational field.

Illegibility costs Americans millions of dollars a year, according to the Handwriting Foundation, and businesses say they lose 10 per cent of their gross annual sales for the same reason, Reynolds said.

He said handwriting experts agree Italic script is impossible to forge and that Italic reveals personality more completely than does any other script.

Handwriting is a graphic art because "if you make signs on a piece of paper, you're designing something," Reynolds said.

He said he believes the function of art is to make the details of daily life more pleasing.

"Calligraphy gives us beauty, legibility, grace, character and rhythm. It commands a personal relationship because of its combination of function and beauty."

In recognition of Reynolds' contribution to the lives of those he has taught, he has been named calligrapher laureate of Oregon.

Vacation Kingdom Of The World: European Nations Considering Middle East Peace Initiative

By MURRAY J. BROWN

UPI Travel Editor

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — If you're planning to take kids to Disney World, don't forget to take along your golf clubs, tennis rackets, and swimsuits as well as the Mickey Mouse hats.

It's not that you won't enjoy the Magic Kingdom with its nearly 35 major attractions in six separate sections sprawling over more than 100 acres in this newer and bigger East Coast version of fabled Disneyland.

They bill the 27,400-acre Disney property in central Florida as "The Vacation Kingdom of the World." So why not take advantage of the varied recreational facilities on the site?

For instance, there are two 18-hole championship golf courses — the 6,924-yard Magnolia, site of the annual PGA-sponsored Walt Disney World Open won last year by Jack Nicklaus (who else?) and the 6,706-yard Palm, both par 72s. Open to the public, green fees are $10 per person plus $10 for an electric golf cart. Clubs can be rented and pros are available for lessons. There's a clubhouse with a pro shop, a restaurant and a cocktail lounge.

Tennis, Anyone?

Tennis courts and tennis shop are reserved for guests of the Contemporary Resort and Polynesian Village hotels on the grounds. Fees for the courts, open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., are $1 per hour in the daytime and $2 per hour in the night time. Rackets can be rented for as low as 50 cents and semi-private or private lessons can be arranged with a pro.

Then there are about 4½ miles of beaches, lakes, pools and a wide range of water sports, such as water skiing, sailing and motor boating. There also are pedal boats, Polynesian war canoe, speedboat and sidewheel steamer rides. Swimming, diving and scuba lessons are available.

Horseback riding is only one of many activities available at the Port Wilderness camp grounds and the Tri-Circle-D Ranch. Horses may be rented for $5 per ride. Also for rent are bicycles ($1 per hour, $3 per day) and canoes ($2 per hour, $5 per day). There's archery (50 cents for 24 arrows), nature walks, and campfire programs, too.

I made one final visit to the park and Disney World with other guests.

New York to Mickey Field in the EAL attraction, the Tomorrowland section.

Mickey Mouse was on hand for the ceremony as were other familiar Disney characters.

Admission is free to the $10 million production which blends cinematography, sound, dimension and diorama to capture the sights, sounds and music of Mexico, Jamaica and other vacation destinations served by EAL. The ride, in three-seat cars called Omnimovers, takes five minutes. It's an exciting experience, highlighted by passing through special effects rooms where the simulated sensation of speed, G-force and altitude of toboggan, speedboat and jetplane were so real my wife and I tightened our grips up to two adults and two

BY K.C. THALER

LONDON (UPI) — A Middle

East peace initiative led by the

countries is under active consideration, diplomatic sources reported last week.

Egypt has put out feelers to European governments and

initiative to coincide with the opening of the U.N. General Assembly next month.

The plan is for members of

munity, including the Common Market countries and Britain, to join the new initiative, which would group key European and

superpower activities.

Foreign ministers of the

"Ten"—the six Common Market countries, Britain and the other three candidate members,

Denmark, Norway and Ireland

—are to meet next month, when the idea of a Middle East initiative will be seriously considered and elaborated, the sources said.

France reportedly is showing strong interest. It is especially the French in whom Egypt is placing its trust. Cairo, however, also has been sounding

London recently and Anglo-

Egyptian relations have shown

Egyptian soundings were said to be continuing, though no specific cut and dried proposals have so far been advanced for a new concrete peace plan of the Europeans.

The United States is standing aside at present from this proposed venture, following its

presidential election, the Europeans apparently might prefer to do their own peace

These developments are

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to the Egyptian National Assembly, referring to impending "moves by Western Europe" among other possible international efforts to break the Middle East deadlock.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Federally-guaranteed loans are most popular with middle-income

parents looking for ways to finance a college education for

up to $1,500 a year at seven per cent interest and start repayment nine to 12 months after graduation. He can take 10 years to repay.

Robert Zubrin, 19, of Great Neck, Long Island, has re-board set up for three players instead of the traditional two.

A math major, he says his new chess game will make it possible for two weak players to join forces in an attempt to overcome a third and superior player.

Egypt's latest soundings in Europe have also been for possible arms supplies, to replace and supplement Russian weapons, amid indications that the Soviets may block

together unless basic Russian demands are met.

Those in the West favoring a major European initiative hold that it would provide a singular opportunity for the European Community to establish itself

as a major political force outside the activities of the superpowers.

align foreign policies in the future.

Human Skin Is Only Irreplaceable Part

By KATHLEEN NEUMEYER

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif.

(UPI) — Thanks to medical science, we can live without our arms, legs, eyes or ears, or with somebody else's heart or kidneys.

But without this "bag" we're all in—our skin—we would die.

Man cannot survive if a large portion of his skin is destroyed.

The largest human organ, the skin encases all the other vital parts, and serves as a barometer to physical and emotional needs. When another part of the body is ailing, the skin can reflect it by flushing, sweating, or breaking out in rashes, hives or boils.

When one is embarrassed, the

frightened, the skin pales.

And Dr. Robert Helmer, a

says skin is the most important factor in physical appearance.

"It's what we see first," he

'Skin deep' Costs

To make certain beauty is at least skin deep, Americans alone spent more than $1.5 billion last year on cosmetics.

"A lot of that is wasted," Helmer says, "on high-priced cosmetics supposedly capable of performing miracles."

Helmer, who has written a book called "Skin Deep, A

Dermatologist's Guide to Skin

Beauty," says old-fashioned remedies often work better than more expensive ointments and salves.

"If the skin is inclined to be dry, ordinary Crisco is an excellent lubricant," Helmer says. "It is odorless, free from becoming rancid, and nonsensitizing."

He is also an advocate of petroleum jelly as a lubricant,

and Fels Naphtha or even Lava soap for oily or rough skin—so long as it is not infected, inflamed or irritated.

"Simple astringents such as witch hazel and rubbing alcohol

also aid in removing excess oil," he says.

He suggests removing blackheads or opening clogged pores

by draping the head with a heavy towel and bending over the sink with the hot water running, exposing the face to the steam for three to 10

Egg white Cure

Brushing egg whites on the face and letting dry for 15-30 minutes will help restore oils to a dry skin, Helmer says. The

Cooked oatmeal makes another good facial pack, Helmer

says.

"After application, it is allowed to dry and then is removed with lukewarm water.

Some oatmeal pack enthusiasts insist that a bit of honey mixed into the pack will give the skin

an additional glow."

cine at Louisiana State University and did an internship and residency at Charity Hospital in New Orleans, served as a dermatological consultant in

war.

He was a fellow in dermatology

at Columbia Presbyterian

Hospital in New York, and has

Angeles area since 1955, serv-

Hospital.

He says overexposure to the sun is the major cause of aging of the skin and of skin cancer, and recommends fair-skinned persons consult a doctor "be-

and destroying in their youth

the skin they will have to live

NEW YORK (UPI)—If a student tells you he goes to school at a University Without Walls, he's probably participat-

involving more than 1,000 students at 20 colleges. These students do most of their

at home, in independent study or in field experience. They have no fixed curriculum, no fixed time period for earning a degree. The University Without Walls experiment is financed by the Ford Foundation and the U.S. Office of Education.

Camera Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

I hand out at my local one-man camera store like others bend an elbow at the neighborhood pub or bar. It's a genial place where we talk photography and observe the problems, rewards—and quirks—of human nature in relation to people's cameras, equipment and picture taking.

I've confirmed that the world of color—in prints, slides and movies—has practically obliterated black-and-white in over-the-counter work. And I've discovered that photo customers judge their picture taking only by the prints they look at, never by the negatives enclosed. If snapshots learn to "read" or even look at their negatives, they would be able to say more often, "Please have these prints remade! They're too light or too dark or off color." Reputable labs never hesitate to correct their printing mistakes. They recognize that automatic machines do goof up at times.

So check every batch of prints with each of its negatives. If you have good prints, you'll see what a good negative should look like and be better able to judge when the negative is too thin, too dark or spoiled by stray light. Bad negatives cannot make good prints so the negatives are the only way to judge when to ask for reprints.

Time after time, I've watched my friend quickly settle a flash unit problem. In almost every case: dead batteries! Before putting in fresh batteries, however, he cleans the contact points to get rid of any corrosion.

That check-your-battery lesson has been preached in every instruction book, every equipment manual and every camera manual. But it's not always followed. Another universal sermon is aimed at eliminating "camera shake" at the instant of snapping. Snapshooters have a tendency to jab their finger down on the release button, jabbing the camera as well. For sharper pictures, hold the camera firmly in the two hands, press firmly against the forehead and move only the forefinger—gently—when squeezing the shutter release.

In the camera shop the other day, the postman came in, held an envelope over the counter and said, "This one almost didn't make it!"

A film can dropped out of a gap in the battered envelope. I examined the can. There was no identification on, or in it. Yes, the customer's name, address and instructions were in the envelope.

Moral: Obviously a regular

Film cans can become "lost orphans" on their way to—or in—processing labs, but an "orphan" with a name tag will eventually be returned.

There are other ways than inadequate envelopes by which prints, slides and films become "orphans" in processing labs. Sometimes people are extremely forgetful or distracted and they fail to put a return address on their pre-paid mailers. Or they write so illegibly, it can't be deciphered or ink is smeared in rainy weather or by wet fingers. And sometimes the small gummed name-and-address sticker is attached poorly and comes off in transit through the mails. (This wouldn't happen if it is anchored with clear transparent tape to any surface.) Finally there is a small percentage of machine and human failure which can happen during the process. Kodak has a special department whose job it is to trace and return these strays to their proper destination if at all possible. Some of their work is like a private eye operation. Personnel are trained to study prints and project slides and movies looking for clues that will identify the photographers or at least the city the pictures came from. They look for auto license plates, city and street signs and any other identifiable landmarks.

When people fail to get their pictures back and describe what's missing, a staffer checks the description with the contents of the "orphans" on hand to see if any match. There have been many happy reunions.

How much easier to do it right in the first place and avoid all the anxiety and complications!

Pollution Cleanup Includes Benefits As Well As Costs

EDITOR'S NOTE: Somebody will pay for the efforts being made to clean the nation's environment. But there will be some financial benefits as well, and at least one group believes the effort will mean a net savings because of decreased damage from pollution. AP environmental writer Stan Benjamin tells about it in the final installment of a four-part series on The Cost of Cleaning Up.

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The American people are not going to let people tell them they got to start driving one car instead of two without there being a revolution."

G. John Lambillotte, manager of a Barborton, Ohio, chemical plant doomed by antipollution enforcement, was arguing that "people who don't know what makes the economy tick are playing with it" for the sake of clean air and water.

"The clean-up will cost somebody," he added, "but it means our standard of living will decrease."

Lambillotte will get an argument from government and citizen-environmentalists on all but one point.

"They all agree that cleaning up 'will cost somebody,'" Government economists have estimated it may cost some $72 billion or more over the next five years to combat air and water pollution.

They say the costs, as unemployment or price increases, will hit industries, workers and communities throughout the nation.

The impact already has hit places like Saltville, Va.; Barborton; Grafton, Mass.; Marietta, Ohio; Alloy, W. Va., and dozens more.

But economics includes benefits as well as costs.

The President's Council on Environmental Quality estimates that air pollution itself costs the nation more than $16 billion each year in damage to human health, plants, materials and property values.

Building upon that estimate, the National Wildlife Federation estimated air and water pollution together were costing the nation almost $29 billion a year.

If so, five years of pollution damage would total $145 billion, outweighing even the impressive cost of reducing it.

The Wildlife Federation figured the antipollution investment would show little return for the first five years.

But by 1979, as pollution damage is reduced, the nation would save enough to get back its early investments, and by 1980 it would be reaping net savings—"plus having a cleaner environment."

Beyond material damages, lie values that have no price tag: natural beauty, waters fit to swim in, days that really are clear enough to see for miles.

Not long ago British citizens collected $4 million to buy back one beautiful painting from U.S. oilman J. Paul Getty and keep it in their country.

Such treasures, in museums, are exposed only to a carefully controlled and filtered atmosphere.

Meanwhile, in the unprotected churches of Italy, the frescoes and sculptured faces of Madonnas and saints, treasured for centuries, are being eaten away by the chemical leprosy of air pollution.

American conservationists worry that the same fate may await the natural rock formations of the West.

Americans pay millions yearly to enjoy scenic beauty and natural recreation sites.

As Congress passes one environmental law after another, the public seems willing to pay for a clean environment.

It even seems willing, at this point, to stand still for some restrictions on its darling, the automobile.

The Environmental Protection Agency has already required big cities, as part of state pollution control plans, to find ways of reducing downtown auto traffic.

On balance, then, the benefits of environmental clean-up may well outweigh the costs even in terms of hard cash.

But the costs and the benefits do not fall evenly.

During interviews in impacted communities, people hardest hit seemed unanimous on two points:

—Pollution must stop but the clean-up was hurting them badly.

—They needed government help in readjusting to an antipollution economy but were not getting it.

There's little help to be had.

A Commerce Department spokesman said its only potential instrument of aid to business was the Economic Development Agency, whose $261 million fund for grants and loans is geared to economic stimulation, not the rescue of pollution casualties.

The Environmental Protection Agency began last March to send "early warnings" to the Labor Department of environmental actions that might cause layoffs.

Asked the fate of four companies on the list, a Labor Department spokesman said in June: "We're not following it."

In another interview, Leonard Burchman, the department's director of interagency relations, admitted that "early warning" was bogged down in paper-shuffling and communication delays.

He said EPA and Labor have revised the system to make it work more swiftly.

Once department regional offices are advised, he said, they send representatives to impacted areas to advise workers of benefit entitlements and make job lists available.

Scientists and technicians laid off in defense cutbacks can get Labor Department funds for job-hunting travel and relocation.

But for employment casualties of the war on pollution, Burchman said, "We don't have such funds and it's unfortunate."

In fact, he said, "They're cutting corners and dollars in a lot of our programs. Of course, supplements (more money) can be brought up real quick."

As Lambillotte put it, while planning the shutdown of his chemical plant: "Sooner or later it comes out of your pocket. How much are people willing to pay?"

Luncheon crush
NEW YORK (UPI)—Some 3.6 million office workers try daily to squeeze into New York's 5,000 restaurants for lunch, although only about 500,000 can be properly served.

The luncheon crush has resulted in installation of tens of thousands of office refreshment units which dispense hot and cold food and beverages.

Nuclear storage
OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (UPI)—The Atomic Energy Commission is planning to build surface facilities capable of storing solidified high-level radioactive wastes from the nuclear power industry.

These facilities are expected to be ready for use by 1979 or 1980 and will supplement storage in deep slat beds hundreds of feet beneath the earth's surface.

Underground Papers Reflect New Mood Of Youth Movements

By JURATE KAZICKAS
Associated Press Writer

With less emphasis on bomb-making and more on day-to-day community problems, underground newspapers continue to grow in numbers and influence. There are at least 400 of these journals published weekly compared with about 200 a few years ago. Underground editors say their total readership is about 20 million.

At the same time that underground papers have folded in major cities like New York and San Francisco, they are taking root in such unlikely turf as Apopka, Fla.; Anniston, Ala.; and McConnellsburg, Pa.

"There isn't a town with a population of more than 50,000 that doesn't have an underground paper," says Max Scherr, founder and editor of the Berkeley Barb.

Since their major mushrooming in the late '60s, the papers have been changing to reflect the new moods of the youth movement. Where once the pages promoted urban guerrilla warfare, now they delve into local problems and issues of interest to a wide range of citizens.

"The underground press represented the vanguard of the revolutionary struggle," says Tom Forcade, a Zippe, Washington correspondent for the Underground Press Syndicate and self-styled authority on the underground scene.

"But what did all those kids living in hippie pads care about bombs? Now the papers are becoming much more relevant and realistic. They write about the alternative institutions of the community like day care centers, the food co-ops, the health clinics."

The papers still speak to the generation that created the counter-culture. They are anti-establishment, enduringly anti-war and anti-Nixon. Revolutionary rhetoric and scatological phrases spice the editorials. Marijuana smoke-ins make headlines. The ads sell sandals and water beds and incense. And the personals, unprintable anywhere else, advertise "Handsome male 30 seeks attractive woman."

Many underground papers have begun aiming at a broader audience, adding book and movie reviews, activities, meetings and demonstrations that aren't covered as daily fare in traditional papers.

Underground papers have not only popularized everything in the counter-culture from drugs to dropping out, they have also aided the momentum of causes like ecology, women's liberation and peace.

Activists credit the Ann Arbor Sun for helping elect two radicals to the City Council and for lower fines for marijuana smokers. Boston, After Dark and the Phoenix claim their investigative stories were instrumental in halting construction of the Park Plaza urban renewal project that many felt threatened the community.

Serving the needs of the underground press are two news-gathering organizations, Liberation News Service and the Underground Press Syndicate.

LNS sends out 10 to 18 stories twice a week to about 500 news-

Of course not. Your house won't burn down or be robbed. And you'll never be sued because somebody slipped on a step.

So don't bother with insurance—on your home, your apartment, your business, your farm.

But what if you're wrong? Then it'll be nice to have a Country Mutual Homeowners or Farmowners policy.

AUXILIARY MEMBERS ATTEND DISTRICT MEET AT QUINCY

The VFW Auxiliary to Post 1379, met August 9th at the Post Home. Protem officers were: treasurer, Adeline Lawson; conductress, Lucy Stillwell; and trustees, Frances Coulton and Margaret Hayden.

President Eleanor Hayes opened the meeting in ritual form. Chaplain, Lottie Bradshaw offered the opening prayer. The president led the group in the pledge to the flag.

Secretary Margaret Gillham read the minutes of the previous meeting and communications. A thankyou card was read from the Margaret Coe family.

The group voted to increase their department hospital pledge. Margaret Hayden reported on the 10th District meeting and the motorcade to the Illinois Soldiers and Sailors home held August 6th in Quincy.

Auxiliary members attending the meeting were Marjorie Hull, Margaret Hayden, Margaret Gillham, Velma Jones and Eleanor Hayes.

Lucy Stillwell was presented a ten year membership pin. Chaplain Lottie Bradshaw offered the closing prayer.

Hazel Thomas name was called for the attendance prize. Door prizes were awarded to Adeline Lawson and Colleen Buss.

Refreshments were served jointly with post members following the meeting. Leah Andrews and Frances Coulton served as hostesses.

The next meeting will be at 8 p.m. Wednesday, September 13th at the Post Home with the post members serving as hosts.

papers and 300 other subscribers who pay anywhere from $200 to $300 a year for the service. A recent packet included stories about Vietnam veteran drug addiction, the Coca-Cola Corporation, interviews with the Paris Peace delegation, and male chauvinism in Gay Liberation.

The Underground Press Syndicate, whose editorial collective includes Jack-O-Lantern and Rosa Mimosa, has been in operation since 1966. It has 450 subscribing papers, of which 250 are syndicate members who have reprint rights of each other's copy.

The sturdiest of the underground papers usually have a life expectancy of two or three years. Some stop publication for a few months to get some money together, like Space City! in Houston. Some take a summer vacation, like the New York Ace.

Financial difficulties and staff dissension are primarily to blame for the burial of some underground papers. But many that fail do so simply for lack of enthusiasm.

"I think the time for this kind of paper is over," said editor Thomas D'Antoni in May upon the death of Harry, 2½ years old in Baltimore.

The East Village Other in New York folded a year ago. "There was a loss of momentum. The paper was resistant to change. There was something new in the air and the EVO didn't feel it and the staff was dissatisfied," says Rec Weiner, who recently started his own paper, the New York Ace.

The circulation of the Berkeley Barb has dropped from 90,000 to 27,000 over the last few years.

Things, Problems Big In Sao Paulo

By DAVID VIDAL
Associated Press Writer
SAO PAULO, BRAZIL (AP) — Things come big in Sao Paulo. The largest industrial complex in Latin America surrounds it. The biggest port on the continent, Santos, lies at its door. The largest land area covered by any city on this side of the world, including Los Angeles, rests beneath it.

Problems come big too. Half of the homes in Latin America's largest city are not served by running water. They have to rely on well-water which can be a breeding ground for pollution and diseases such as cholera and dysentery. Almost a third of the city lacks a tie-in to the sewage system. Three hundred thousand persons pour into Brazil's leading metropolis every year in search of jobs and opportunities.

The jobs and opportunities are there for qualified and well-trained individuals. Thus many of the immigrants wind up in decrepit shanty towns on the city's outskirts.

They make this monstrous city of 6 million inhabitants one of the fastest-growing cities in the world.

"It doesn't make any sense to be pouring money into the city to solve problems brought on by increasing population, since we can't keep up with it," the man holding the reins says. "So we have to stop the population growth."

Mayor Jose Carlos Figueredo Ferraz sees Sao Paulo as a problem of "undisciplined growth." He has pushed for creation of an "infrastructure" to tame it.

"The plan calls for this, but the rest of it is mostly restrictive. If it weren't our efforts would be in vain."

The "Plan for Integral Development" has been approved by the Municipal Council.

"Some urban plans before this administration were made to accommodate a population of as much as 30 million. We don't want that. Plans now foresee a restriction on growth. This is a complete turnabout in municipal policy."

The main points of the plan call for a new series of expressways to speed "Paulistas" to and from work, strict anti-pollution measures and better use of available land through a new building code.

The code limits new construction to certain areas away from the jammed and traffic-congested downtown districts. By luring builders away from the heart of the city, the mayor hopes new population "nuclei" will be formed.

Eventually the basic reasons for a booming population—jobs, diversions and homes—will be moved further and further away from the city, thus discouraging new arrivals.

New highways which will crisscross the city will both reduce chronic traffic congestion and a high accident fatality rate. On a recent Friday an estimated one million man-hours of work went down the drain as hundreds of commuters remained snarled in downtown traffic.

Sao Paulo is spared some of the money problems afflicting some cities.

Her $350 million budget in 1971 was six times bigger than her 1965 expenditures. The mayor says much of this is due to new state aid, which accounts for 40 per cent of Sao Paulo's income.

Without this collaboration "the city would be an administrative disaster," he says.

"I won't say everything is rosy if it isn't and our approach is based on a realistic appraisal and is not pessimistic," the mayor adds.

"But I remain optimistic that we will solve the problems."

Shortages Common In Chile Economy

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — "Sorry. Only one kilo per customer. Give back the five-kilo bag of sugar please," the overworked girl at the supermarket cash register said curtly.

"Why?" the white-haired grandmother asked. "Because there's a shortage," the girl replied.

An argument followed. The bag was spilled. Amanda Ponce Cisternas, 70, who minutes before had fought with other customers to grab the bag of precious sugar off the stand, collapsed and died of a heart attack.

The incident at a Santiago supermarket this week underscored the mounting tribulations that Chileans have been facing in the 22 months since Marxist President Salvador Allende took office.

To buy bread, they must line up for an hour or more outside corner bakeries. Flour is so scarce that bakers are down to a 48-hour supply.

They must stand in line even longer to buy chicken. Chileans haven't seen a quarter of beef in almost two months, much less taste a steak.

There is also a scarcity of pork, mutton, fish and other seafood. Butter and margarine, milk, sausage, bacon and potatoes are in short supply too.

So are crackers, rice, spaghetti, wine, the local liquor pisco, razor blades, toilet paper, dill pickles, diapers and sanitary napkins.

Canned foods were relatively abundant until the end of July, when Allende's leftist administration started creating problems for the canneries prior to expropriating them.

Prescription eyeglasses take 15 days to two months to make. Even bed sheets, pillows and other bed linens have been scarce since the Allende government "requisitioned" — a euphemism for taking over — Chile's six large textile mills.

Sporadic shortages of medicines, dentists' gold for filling teeth, some kinds of wheel chairs and crutches, automobile tires and other parts, components for machinery, nails, cement, teletype paper rolls, screws, nuts, bolts, cameras, film and photolab chemicals plague the average Chilean.

There aren't even new films. Moviehouse make do rerunning features that date back to the Hollywood times of Lauren Bacall and Alan Ladd.

ROODHOUSE COUPLE CAMP IN ALASKA

ROODHOUSE — Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kemp, rural Roodhouse, accompanied by her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. P. Harris of Hayes, Va., have returned from a month-long camping trip to Alaska.

En route, the group visited the Kemps' daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Lisk of Lincoln; their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Kemp of Beloit, Wis.; and in Alaska the time was spent with the sister of Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Charles W. Brooks, and husband of Anchorage.

The Brooks couple took the visitors on a number of trips including the gold mines at Fairbanks and other cities and sites.

After returning to Roodhouse, Mr. and Mrs. Harris are visiting her mother, Mrs. Charles E. Martin, and others. Also visiting her mother is Mrs. Charles W. Brooks of Anchorage, Alaska, and her son, Steve Brooks, a senior at Kansas State University, Manhattan, Kans., who has come to the area to meet with the other relatives.

Mrs. Cloyd Ruyle of Roodhouse has received word of the death August 19 of Ed McDonald of Stockton, California. Mr. McDonald was the husband of the former Eileen Morrow, a native of Roodhouse. Funeral services will be held in California.

Business Mirror

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1969 the Internal Revenue Service eliminated the 1040A short form tax return, supposedly to save the taxpayer money. Now it is being brought back, purportedly for the same reason.

The about face exemplifies more than the dilemma of the IRS in devising a satisfactory reporting method for the small taxpayer. It also symbolizes the growing dispute between the IRS and the nation's tax services.

More specifically, it involves the services and IRS Commissioner John W. Walters, who believes that most small taxpayers can work out their own returns and should be encouraged to do so. Thus the return of the short form.

The tax preparers claim that while small taxpayers might save the fee involved in obtaining aid, which runs from $5 up, they are likely to lose many times that amount in overpayments.

They claim that the short form, on which deductions are not itemized, will encourage overpayment, especially as a result of recent changes in the law.

Understandably, the position of the tax preparers is influenced by self-interest. Mass acceptance of the short form would cost the larger preparers millions of dollars and drive out of business thousands of smaller ones. But they claim their concern goes beyond themselves.

Richard Bloch, chairman of H & R Block, insists that return of the 1040A is an injustice to millions of taxpayers, an injustice he says is compounded by a more complex set of tax requirements.

The short form, he says, will encourage taxpayers to ignore itemizing their returns for, among others, "the new child care provision which offers a potential deduction of $4,800, sick pay, retirement income credit and more."

Walters believes it is necessary to make tax filing easier. While the long form is felt to be only slightly more complicated than the short, there is an indisputable psychological barrier involved.

This barrier often motivates the 30 million or more taxpayers with income mainly from wages, dividends and interest to seek out the services of private tax preparers, to whom they pay a fee that Walters sees as wasteful.

The preparers disagree. Says Bloch: "We have seven million clients and in general they save far more in taxes than they pay us for our services." The preparers maintain that the IRS' own studies fail to support the contention that the short form is a money saver.

WHEAT FUTURES ADVANCE 3 CENTS

CHICAGO (AP) — The demand for commodity futures continued strongly on the Chicago Board of Trade today.

Brokers for export interest as well as public accounts bought wheat futures with the result that the nearby September option rise 3 cents a bushel. Soybeans advanced 2 1/2 cents and oats and corn around 1 cent. Soybean meal moved up $1 a ton but soybean oil prices were little changed.

Iced broilers were little changed in very dull trade.

Wheat futures have advanced nearly 8 cents Tuesday, then closely with a gain of 4 1/2 cents. Export buying, possibly against sales abroad was a feature of the market. As prices advanced there was heavy short-covering.

Soybeans had opened on a mixed tone then improved quickly along with meal under good commercial buying and short-covering.

A cool front reportedly was moving into the Midwest and the trade viewed this as a bullish influence on corn futures.

After a gain of nearly 1 cent, however, the pace of trade bogged down.

Oats reflected the strength in corn but trade was slow.

After about an hour, wheat was 1 1/2 to 2 cents a bushel higher, September 1.86 1/4; corn was 1/2 to 1/4 higher, September 1.27; oats were unchanged to 1/4 higher, September 3.44 1/2.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Investors moved into lower price-earnings ratio stocks Wednesday, but despite weakness in blue chips several analysts thought the market showed an upward bias.

"The strength is swinging over to the pale-blue chips," said John J. Smith, analyst for Farnestock & Co.

Among the reasons cited by analysts for the market's softness were expectations that banks would raise their prime interest rate, a White House announcement that no important peace announcement would be made by the President in his speech accepting the Republican presidential nomination, and weakness in the dollar.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks finished the day off 3 1/2 at 970.35, but advances led declines 782 to 662 among the 1,763 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

The broadly based Big Board index of 1,400 common stocks dropped .07 to 61.78. The Associated Press 60-stock average gained .9 to 331.6.

Savings and loan issues were among the most actively traded stocks.

First Charter Financial, in the No. 2 spot, was up 1 to 31 1/2. Gulf Oil, unchanged at 26 on 249,900 shares, was the most-active Big Board stock, while McGraw Hill, up 1/4 at 15 1/4, on 192,000 shares, moved into third spot chiefly on a block of 174,100 shares at 14 1/4.

Champion Home Builders, off 1/2 to 17 1/4, was the most-active Amex issue, followed by U.S. Filter, down 1/4 at 22 1/4 and Anthony Industries, up 1/4 to 28 1/2.

Rail Workers' Pension Fund Reforms Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional commission predicts the federally-administered pension fund for railroad workers will go bankrupt by 1988 unless there are quick financial reforms.

The dispute already brewing over the question of who should bear the fund out of trouble may carry the seeds of serious labor unrest in the railroad industry within the next year or two.

Labor spokesmen have suggested that railroad management take over the main burden of financing the pension fund, now supported by almost equal contributions from management and employees.

Warning of the fund's jeopardy is the Commission on Railroad Retirement, established two years ago to examine the railroad pension system and the federal Railroad Retirement Board which administers it.

The report has not yet been published but the key chapter of conclusions and recommendations has been completed and was obtained by the Associated Press from a commission source.

The railroad pension system is the only federally administered pension plan for workers in private industry. The unique arrangement was created by Congress in 1935 to protect railroad pensions during the Great Depression.

In addition to providing an employer-employee contributory fund, the complex legal arrangement also provides railroad workers with a substitute for regular Social Security coverage.

The commission report said railroad employment has declined steeply over the past 25 years, while the number of pensioners is only now reaching its expected peak.

In addition, the report said, retirement benefits have been increased but employer and worker contributions have not kept pace.

"Unless corrective action is taken promptly there will be large cash flow deficits, and the system will go broke in about 16 years," the report states.

The commission opposed further benefit increases, currently under consideration in Congress, and said worker and employer contributions must be increased to maintain the fund's solvency at the current benefit level.

But it ducked the question of who should pay how much of future contributions.

The report recommended a clear division between railroad pension benefits paid in lieu of regular Social Security and those paid under a supplementary pension program.

It said railroad workers should be covered by regular Social Security, with supplemental benefits "floated on top."

Peronists Protest Killing Of Guerrillas

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — An uproar of criticism from demonstrators and students and the powerful Peronist party boiled up against Argentina's military government today over the killing of 15 guerrilla prisoners accused of staging their second jailbreak in a week.

The supreme council of the Peronistas, Argentina's largest political party, branded the killings Tuesday "a new violation of human rights" and said it would send its own investigators to the scene at the Trelew marine base prison, 700 miles southwest of Buenos Aires.

Other politicians and lawyers for the slain guerrillas referred to the killings as executions and as a massacre.

The Peronist party also said it was sending doctors to care for four wounded survivors and lawyers "to assist other persons in the area deprived of their liberty."

The uproar from the Peronistas could jeopardize plans for national elections next March to return Argentina to civilian rule. President Alejandro Lanusse, who is also commander of the army, has called the elections but negotiations with the Peronistas and other parties are stalled over their charges that the military plans to "condition" the voting.

The guards at the marine base on the South Atlantic coast killed 11 men and four women and wounded three men and one woman. The 19 were in the stockade after surrendering to authorities following a successful jailbreak and hijacking Aug. 15. They broke out of the jail at Rawson, seized the nearby Trelew airport and commandeered an airliner on which six of their chieftains rode to neighboring Chile.

The military command in Trelew said the prisoners tried to escape before dawn Tuesday after informing the guard captain that one of them was ill and needed attention.

The guerrillas' lawyers told a news conference the prisoners could not have been trying to escape because they were under heavy guard in separate cells.

Sources Of English Mixed As Goulash

NEW YORK (AP) — This "goulash" is a Hungarian word, "gulyas," meaning herdman's stew. "Cashew" came from the Portuguese. "Pastrami" is from the Rumanian "pastrama" by way of Yiddish. And "whisky" is from the Irish Gaelic and Scottish Gaelic.

The three words quoted above have one thing in common: besides being well known, they do not come from Latin, French or Old English as most English words do.

The English language always has been a borrower of other people's words with the result that many of its familiar, everyday words have very unfamiliar or un-English origins.

"Boondocks," for instance, comes from a word in the Tagalog language that means "mountain." Americans use it to mean "rural or back country; the sticks," according to Webster's Third New International dictionary. Tagalog is spoken in the Philippines.

"Coffee" comes from the Italian "caffè" which derives from the Turkish word "kahve" that, in turn, comes from the Arabic "qahwah."

And "taboo" is from the Gonga Islands of the southwest Pacific. In Tongan, "tabu" is something "charged with a dangerous supernatural power and forbidden to profane use."

Some "exotic" English words come from such diverse languages as Tahitian, Chinese, Malay, Turkish, Japanese, Tamil and even Kongo.

The word "catsup," for instance, comes from a Malay word "kechap," meaning spiced fish sauce. "Bamboo" also is from a Malay word spelled "bambu."

From Tahitian there is "tattoo," which means the same in Tahiti as it does here. The Chinese gave the language "tea" and from the Persian comes "shawl."

"Quite often, when the first settlers in a country found something new, they simply adopted the native word for it," according to Dr. H. Bosley Woolf, editorial director for dictionaries for G. & C. Merriam, publishers of Merriam-Webster dictionaries.

"When the first English settlers spotted what the Algonquin Indians call an 'arah-kun,' they took the Indian word and made it 'raccoon,' Woolf points out. 'In fact, the American Indian gave us such words as 'persimmon,' 'hickory,' 'caucus' and many others."

Here are some other examples from the international melting pot of words. The word

Dorothy Lamour wore one and made it famous and the word for "sarong" comes from the Malay "kain sarong," meaning a cloth sheath. "Shampoo" is from the Hindi; "molasses" from Portuguese; "hanker" probably from Flemish; and "boomerang" is a native name in Australia.

There are few, if any, languages on earth that haven't contributed to the English vocabulary, according to Woolf Basque, for instance is a very old language whose origin is unknown but which is still spoken by a people living in the Western Pyrenees in Spain. This language has given English "jai alai" by way of the Spanish. "Jai" means "festival" and "alai" "merry" and the compound refers to the game played with a ball and a long curved wicker basket strapped to the wrist.

America's Corporations Fingers In Foreign Pies

CHICAGO (UPI)—About 3,800 U.S. corporations have a major interest in approximately 20,000 foreign business enterprises—and the number of American employees moving to these overseas operations has been rising at the rate of 15 per cent annually.

In addition, students, teachers, military personnel, retirees make up a total of more than one million Americans now living in foreign countries.

For those who may be joining this U.S. population abroad, some moving tips from Fernstrom Moving System, an international moving and storage company:

—Make a complete inventory and keep records of all possessions. This should include the date they were bought, how much they cost, and where they were purchased. Several foreign countries require this information and it should be kept up to date.

—Always let the moving company know where you can be reached prior to leaving the country and after your arrival. This also means you should keep in touch with the foreign agent of the mover. For Customs clearance and delivery, the agent must know where to find you.

—Carry all important papers, documents and items of extreme value with you. This type of liability will not be accepted by the moving company. These include medical and dental records, deeds, prescriptions, jewelry, stamp collections and currency. If you cannot carry some of these valuables, send them by registered mail.

—Familiarize yourself with the rules and regulations involving duty and which items you are allowed to take into your new country. Along this same line, find out what items you might need and will be unable to purchase. Many times it is necessary to stock up on powdered milk, canned goods and toilet articles. Your best source of information is the local consulate office or trade mission.

—Insure your goods adequately. The value should include the total cost of moving expenses.

—Make sure you properly sign all documents for Customs clearance. To get your household goods as quickly as possible, without a lot of red tape, these papers must be completed and ready at the port of embarkation.

YOUR BIRTHDAY AND HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, AUGUST 24 — Born today, you are impatient for results. No matter what you become involved in, you want—and expect—that effects should very rapidly follow causes, and if they do not you are more than disappointed; you are very likely angry. Your anger, however, usually does not lead to a breakdown of effort on your part; rather, it generally leads to greater determination than ever, with the consequence that "next time" is almost always better, more satisfying. Thus, in your case, impatience may not be such a bad thing.

You do not accept adverse criticism well, even when it is given in the most generous of spirit. Indeed, any who dare to speak ill of your work or of you personally would be wise to have as few dealings with you thereafter as possible, for you will neither forgive nor forget very soon. Surprisingly, however, in your secret heart you may very well consider the criticism carefully and make effort to improve your work or yourself accordingly.

Your taste runs toward scientific activities and methods of operation. Painting, music, and literature interest you to some degree, but only if you have had training in one or another of them will your interest burgeon into genuine time-consuming, pleasure-giving activity. Otherwise, you will be prone to look to science rather than to art for your answers.

To find what is in store for you tomorrow, select your birthday and read the corresponding paragraph. Let your birthday star be your daily guide.

Friday, August 25

VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23) — With exceptional executive ability going for you, you can make this a day of great gain—not to mention surprise—for you and loved ones.

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23) — Carelessness in your personal appearance may cause you to be out of the running when it comes to benefits. See to good grooming.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — You can't expect to be waited on hand and foot—not even by those who love you best. Lend a hand in the interest of your own well-being.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22) — Combine feeling with thought for best results. To let either lead the other when it comes to making decisions could be bad for your future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23 - Jan. 20) — A day which requires you to work especially hard to achieve good results. The outward expression of inner feelings could serve you well.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19) — Know what is going on in the employment scene. You may have to make an extra effort to ingratiate yourself with high-ups.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 21) — Though you may feel uncertain and undecided this morning, by afternoon your self-confidence returns and you begin to make real progress.

ARIES (March 22-April 20) — Passion, poetry, and patience: these three prove to be the special ingredients to make this a remarkable day. Remember to keep a friend informed.

TAURUS (April 21-May 21) — Unless your interest is deep and reasonably lasting, you would be wise not to interfere in another's business. Keep your head above water.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21) — Security for yourself and loved ones can be purchased via loyalty to higher-ups on the employment scene. Consider and reconsider pros and cons.

CANCER (June 22-July 23) — An excellent day for the late bloomer. Know your business and employ a discriminating mind in the interest of a far-flung success.

LEO (July 24-Aug. 23) — You should be able to call a whole new ball game by this afternoon. Friends and family do much to clear the way for an immediate success.

SCHMITT SEEKS ACCREDITATION

BEARDSTOWN — As a result of adverse action by the joint commission on hospital accreditation, the Schmitt Memorial hospital board of trustees has requested a resurvey of the local facility in October.

This action came on the heels of a report on a May survey that accreditation for Schmitt had been denied.

Robert Donaldson, president of the board, said he did not feel the May action would affect operation of the hospital here at present. It is felt that progress made on internal procedures will bring a favorable report in October.

Directors and the medical staff here have been concerned since 1967 about possible loss of accreditation.

It had been expected that construction work on a new 52 bed hospital here would be underway by this time, but there has been delay due to difficulty in securing financial help from participating governmental agencies, The Housing and Urban Development and Health, Education and Welfare agencies.

Japanese-Americans Put In Camps During WWII

By MATHIS CHAZANOV

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI)—

Thirty years ago more than 110,000 Japanese-Americans, more than two-thirds of them native-born citizens, were ordered from their homes on the West Coast to internment camps in the bleak back country of the West.

The 10 camps were thrown up overnight in remote spots far from the lush farmlands and bustling cities where the Japanese community flourished from the turn of the century. They were meant to be temporary but they stayed in operation until a year after World War II ended.

The deportees were ordered from their homes under Executive Order 9066, which delegated to military authorities the power to designate areas "from which any or all persons may be excluded."

Never a Threat
Most of them were forced to give up their businesses, farms and homes at a great loss. None of the hundreds of rumors about the threat they allegedly posed to America ever was proved.

In fact, a battalion of Japanese-American volunteers fought with great gallantry in the Italian campaign and became the most decorated unit in the U.S. Army.

The story was recorded at the time by photographers for newspapers and the government, and also in pictures by private citizens, some of them internees themselves.

Maisie and Richard Conrat viewed more than 25,000 negatives in the files of the National Archives and Records Service to assemble a 65-picture collection which documents in black and white the story of intolerance.

The exhibit, titled "Executive Order 9066," was sponsored by the California Historical Society. It is currently on a tour of museums in the West.

The exhibit opens with a straightforward shot of a young man looking into the camera; moves to a grandfather with a baby on his shoulder shifts to a mother, a basket of strawberries in her hand, posing awkwardly in a field with her son who is in Army uniform.

Dorothea Lange, who took those pictures and most of the others for the War Relocation Authority (WRA), said of the young private: "He is the youngest of six children, two of them volunteers in the U.S. Army. The mother, now 53, came here from Japan 37 years ago."

Stark Reality
Gray shades dominate the sharply-focused pictures. There is no artiness, just reality, in the gray walls, sky, faces of the group of farm workers talking on a gray sidewalk in front of a WRA office in Byron, Calif. A grim-faced soldier, Caucasian, looks on from the door.

Dorothea Lange said the men were debating "whether or not to return to the ranch to work for the remaining three days before evacuation, or whether they shall spend that time on their personal affairs."

On the dusty outskirts of the camp at Manzanar, Calif., deportees sweat to clear the sagebrush for clapboard shacks to house their fellows who haven't arrived yet.

A letter from a private at Fort Leonard Wood in Missouri rests against his picture on his sister's chest of drawers.

Sad-eyed Ladies

Two sad-eyed ladies display the little starred banners that mean a son in the service. A wide-eyed tyke with a tag around her neck peers solemnly from the grimy window of the train that will take her to Tule Lake, Calif., or to Laramie, Wyo., or Kootenai County, Idaho.

A dust storm blows in from the desert, obscuring the jagged Sierra Nevada Mountains. Two children play tag under a billowing American flag.

"Self-examination is crucial to a nation's health," the Conrats said in their introduction to the exhibit. "We feel that patriotism should not simply mean defending one's country, right or wrong. Patriotism should mean dedication to making one's country a wiser and more just nation."

Marriage And Show Business Combo Works For Benjamins

By RENA PEDERSON

DALLAS (UPI) — Teaming marriage and show business doesn't always succeed. But Richard Benjamin and Paula Prentiss are among the couples making the combination work.

The former sweethearts from Northwestern University have been building their careers since they married in 1962. Now they're starting in two of the biggest movies of the year. He plays the lead in "Portnoy's Complaint," and she's got a plum part in "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers."

"Sometimes we don't even believe it," said Miss Prentiss in her bubbly, big brown-eye style. "When we were studying drama at Northwestern we would joke that someday we would be famous and be interviewed by everybody and have a wov apartment in New York. And it's all true now."

"It's fun being a movie star, it really is," she said. It wasn't always as easy as fan magazines make it sound. Her career got off to a faster start than his, with juicy roles in "Where the Boys Are" and "What's New Pussycat." Then they teamed up for a comedy television series "His and Hers" that was well-liked but not long-lived.

That's Show Biz
The ups and downs of show business pressure sent her to the psychiatrist and him touring in road shows. Then he got the lead in "Goodbye Columbus" and blizzed on to star in "Diary of a Mad Housewife" and "Marriage of a Young Stockbroker."

Then they were both in "Catch 22" (Benjamin says, "but we didn't have any scenes together"). Now they commute between television talk shows and big cities to plug their new movies.

"We'd like to do a movie together, but most producers don't go for the idea," Benjamin said. "It's funny but a lot of people think because we're already married, it's not exciting or credible for us to romance on film."

Benjamin—who does most of the family speaking while his wife does most of the interrupting—said they might consider making another TV series together. But he said, "I don't think so right now. We're having too much fun making movies. And I'm considering directing."

Who's Boss?

As for who dominates whom, Benjamin said with a sly smile, "We both have our areas. We communicate and we don't do anything against each other."

"Or without each other if we can help it," his wife interjected. Together they have four of the brownest eyes in Cinema scope. Both have thick dark hair and olive complexions. Since he's six feet two and she's five feet 10 they can make a very striking entrance.

"We never wanted to be apart," Miss Prentiss said, trying to explain what keeps their marriage together in a profession of ego, make-believe and big breakups.

"We had our bad times when we were working at opposite ends of the world," Benjamin admitted. "We could have separated but...well, we didn't. We couldn't or can't."

They try to take a professional attitude about nude scenes and love scenes to avoid jealousy. And Miss Prentiss said competing made their careers and marriage "more exciting, because sometimes I'm on Dick Cavett and he's on Johnny Carson or we both on together."

They are currently working on a big new apartment in New York and the actress said she'd "looooove" to have children. Benjamin kidded that they make an interesting combination: he's Jewish and from New York and she's Italian from Houston, Tex.

Different Childhoods
"Paula's background is entirely different from mine," he said. "Dinner at her house, for instance is deathly quiet, not a word. She came to meet my family over dinner and afterwards she asked what the argument and screaming was about. I explained that was no argument. That was simply dinner."

"Oh it's true," she said with an emphatic roll of those eyes. He wore a gold medicine bracelet she recently gave him for his 34th birthday. "I don't have arthritis, but I'm sure, if it's from her and I wear it long enough, I will have."

"Oh, now that's not true," she protested and he just smiled.

Building Of Subway Disrupts Business
SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Up on the Rua Vergueiro, in the commercial district known as Paraíso, Joaquim Jorge Cipolla's furniture sales have dropped from $50,000 a month in 1969 to $6,000.

Jose Antonio Mariano, who sells men's clothing on the same street, was hit even harder.

"Since they started digging up the holes, my sales dropped between 80 and 90 per cent and there's no way you can keep a business open like that."

And the bus lines responsible for transporting the city's 6 million inhabitants about no longer pass on the Rua Vergueiro, dealing another blow to business.

But without the feverish construction, the problems now facing the Rua Vergueiro's merchants could be citywide.

"Without the subway, transportation in Sao Paulo soon would be chaotic," warns Mayor Jose Carlos Figueredo Ferraz, adding "The subway alone won't solve the traffic problem, but it certainly will be greatly improved."

Another Rua Vergueiro merchant philosophically notes that "sometimes things have to worsen in order to improve."

Workmen are going at it night and day on some sections of Sao Paulo's planned 41.5 mile subway.

Tragedy-Dogged Family Gets Aid From Mail Clerk
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Seven members of a tragedy-dogged Chicago family visited Nashville's famed Grand Ole Opry over the weekend because of the efforts of an unlikely philanthropist.

Mrs. Joseph Andruk accompanied her three muscular dystrophy stricken sons, Albert, 24, Charles, 22, and Bruno, 19, to Nashville aboard a chartered bus arranged by Jere Reagan, a Chicago bus station mail clerk.

Also aboard the bus were one of the Andruk's daughters, Lillian, 17, who has begun to show symptoms of the same disease that has paralyzed her brothers.

The brothers' father, a disabled veteran, is unable to work. Another sister, Ellalouise, has a brain tumor. The oldest Andruk son, Anthony, died of muscular dystrophy in January at the age of 25.

The Andruk brothers are country music fans, who just naturally wanted to visit the Grand Ole Opry. The weekend visit was the brothers' first trip to the famed Saturday night show at old Ryman Auditorium.

Reagan, the father of four children himself, has been helping the Andruks for some time.

OLD BUILDING
HALIFAX (AP) — The century-old Court House is being renovated for use by the Nova Scotia government's libraries and audio-visual services. Built in 1862, the court house was replaced recently by a modern structure on the harbor front. About $100,000 will be spent on repairs and alterations to the old stone building, which is valued in part for its architectural features.

Mary, 15-year-old pet of Alfred Gooch, of Woodbridge, Suffolk, started her sex change by growing bright black, blue and white feathers. Then she produced a black curling tail feather and white collar, like her male companion, William, and stopped laying eggs.

BANKS HIRING MINORITIES
WASHINGTON (AP) — Employment of minority groups by banks increased 120 per cent between 1966 and 1970, a U.S. Treasury official told a recent meeting of the American Bankers Assn. here.

He said that black employment rose 147 per cent, Spanish employment increased 90 per cent and Oriental employment was up 63 per cent.

McGovern Seeks Victory Among New Young Voters

EDITOR'S NOTE—It is about him and President Nixon that the following, second of youth vote alone, but he probably cannot win without it, either. McGovern hopes to find victory in November. Will they carry him to the White House? How do the young new voters feel?

By TERRY RYAN
Associated Press Writer
Sen. George McGovern canthe first time in a presidential election. It is the 11 million to 20 million-olds enfranchised by the 26th Amendment which lowered the legal voting age. It is the 14 million 21-to-24-year-olds too young to vote in 1968. Together they form the largest group of new voters since women won the vote five decades ago.

McGovern won California's crucial Democratic primary in large measure by garnering 70 per cent of the youth vote. Without that bulge, says Washington pollster Richard Hart, Sen. Hubert Humphrey would have carried the state, a judgment with which McGovern's advisers agree. The California win practically clinched the presidential nomination for McGovern.

But the primaries are over, the real race begun. The polls show McGovern trailing President Nixon. Thus the youth vote, no matter how much of it he gets, could not provide a winning margin unless McGovern closes the gap with other voters.

"Anyone who thinks someone can win on the youth vote is crazy," said Edward T. O'Donnell Jr., national youth coordinator for the McGovern campaign. "It is a big factor, but it is not the election."

The youth vote, however, remains a cornerstone of the McGovern victory strategy. Campaign advisers speak of a 3.5 million to 5-million vote surplus from the 18-to-24-year-olds, the margin of victory, they hope, if McGovern can come within striking distance in other sectors of the electorate.

"I don't believe we can win without the youth vote," said Bob Weiner, who is handling McGovern's young voter registration effort. "We need all the voters, but the youth vote is critical."

The Republicans, of course, do not think McGovern can pile up that winning margin among the young voters. They have a well-funded effort set up to deny McGovern that youth vote plurality, and find much comfort in a recent Gallup Poll. The poll reported that McGovern enjoyed a comfortable lead of 57 per cent to 41 per cent among young people already registered. But Nixon led by 46 to 43 per cent among those not registered. Nixon campaign staffers said young voters have no place to go but down. McGovern aides responded that the poll was meaningless because it was conducted before McGovern's nomination.

To get some indication of young voter sentiment, Associated Press bureaus round the country interviewed young people, asking whom they would support and why. The interviews disclosed some pro-McGovern attitudes widely held among young people. A desire for change—nothing specific, just change was mentioned by many McGovern supporters.

Young people will vote for McGovern because they do not like or trust Nixon and think McGovern is more sincere and honest. Many young people said they want the Vietnam war ended and do not believe Nixon will do it. There was little mention of such supposed youth issues as amnesty and abortion and drug law liberalization.

On the minus side, potential young voters criticized McGovern for vacillating on issues and making too many promises.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton's departure as the vice-presidential candidate cut both ways. Most of those interviewed said they did not like it, but few McGovern supporters said it would cause them to switch allegiance.

McGovern's pledges on the war, welfare and defense spending appealed to many of the young people interviewed, but others objected to them as worthless campaign oratory that makes McGovern just another politician.

Both the McGovern and Nixon organizations have extensive plans for registration drives and get-out-the-vote campaigns. Both sides said they would spend at least $1 million on these efforts, but the price tag probably will run closer to $4 million or $5 million each. While the Committee for the Re-election of the President is better financed, the McGovern campaign has the experience gained in the primaries on its side.

Neither side will ignore anyone on its search for young people likely to vote their way. But while the Nixon effort will be directed mainly at white, middle-class suburbs, McGovern campaigners will also scour the inner cities and set up registration tables at food stamp distribution centers, unemployment-ment offices and rock music concerts. "Obviously we will go to our strength," said Weiner. "We are more likely to set up a table outside a library than a bank. We are not going to blitz simply the farm states."

Both sides will hit the factories and the campuses, but it is clear the McGovern people feel more at home with college students than blue-collar workers. "We don't have the common ground with gas station attendants and secretaries that we have with students," said Dan Sheehan, assistant director of the McGovern campaign in New York State.

"It is something we have to work on." Since only about 20 per cent of the young voters are students, McGovern must carry the young blue- and white-collar workers, housewives and military people to rack up the youth vote percentage his people think he needs. They are counting on superior organization and George McGovern to do this.

"I don't think we are doing that well with the nonstudents," said O'Donnell, "but as McGovern's views become known on issues that concern them, we will do much better." Next: The Presidency and the New Voter.

Nelson One-Hits Sox In 1-0 Blank

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Roger Nelson pitched 7 2-3 innings of hitless baseball Wednesday night and finished with a one-hitter as the Kansas City Royals trimmed the Boston Red Sox 3-0.

Nelson, 7-4, had allowed only one base runner on a walk until Ben Oglivie broke up his no-hit bid with a single to right field on a 3-2 pitch.

Nelson, who struck out nine, was locked in a scoreless duel with Boston's Sonny Siebert until the sixth inning.

Amos Otis got the Royals started with a one-out single and stole second before John Mayberry walked with two out. Then Ed Kirkpatrick tagged a home run into the right field seats, giving Nelson the lead.

Nelson twice struck out the side in order and allowed just two base runners, facing only 29 batters.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Felix Millan batted out three hits and "Dusty" Baker hit his 10th home run of the baseball season Wednesday night, leading the Atlanta Braves defeat the Philadelphia Phillies 9-6.

The Braves batted around and scored five runs in the fourth inning off loser Wayne Twitchell, 3-5.

Ralph Garr started the big inning with a single and scored after a single by Millan as Baker grounded out. Jim Breazeale singled and Darrell Evans doubled to make it 3-0. Evans took third on the throw to the plate and scored when shortstop Larry Bowa's throw bounced into the Philadelphia dugout. Doubles by Mike Lum and Marty Perez made it 5-0.

Baker homered after a Millan single in the fifth and Atlanta scored single runs in the sixth with three walks and a sacrifice fly by Millan, and in the seventh on a Lum double and Paul Casanova's single.

The Phillies knocked out Jim Hardin, 3-0, with three singles and a three-run double by Willie Montanez in the eighth. Don Money added a two-run homer in the ninth.

Alvin Brown Picks Western

MACOMB — High school All-American running back, Alvin Jerome Brown, Eisenhower-Blue Island High School, will attend Western Illinois on a football scholarship. The big, 6-3, 195 pounder reported to the Leathernecks' pre-season camp this past weekend (Aug. 19).

The incoming WIU freshman led Eisenhower's Cardinals to an 8-0-1 South Suburban League championship last year in scoring 14 touchdowns and rushing for 1326 yards. He was selected to every major Illinois high school All-State team as well as being picked to Scholastic Magazine's All-American squad.

"Jerome was sought after by nearly every major midwestern team," says Western's Defensive coordinator Pete Rodriguez, "and we feel extremely proud of our football program that we could attract a player of his caliber... he is definitely one of the greatest prospective athletes to ever choose Western Illinois."

Brown, who was his high school's most outstanding athlete last season, will be used as a tailback at WIU, according to head coach Darrell Mudra.

He will join high school teammate Lewis Harris at Western. Harris, a 6-2, 190 all-state linbacker, inked a national letter-of-intent early last spring.

Wood, Allen Boost 5-2 Chisox Margin

CHICAGO (AP) — Wilbur Wood, backed by Luis Alvarado's bases-loaded single off Mel Stottlemyre, 12-15, in the third inning gave the White Sox a 2-0 lead. Mike Anderson's RBI single made it 3-1 for Chicago in the fifth.

Wood, who has lost 11, gave up a run in the fifth when Stottlemyre singled home Celerino Sanchez. New York scored on unearned runs in the seventh on John Ellis' pinch single.

Lord Killanin New Olympic President

MUNICH (AP) — Lord Killanin, a blustery, pipe-smoking Irish peer, succeeded Avery Brundage as president of the International Olympic Committee Wednesday and found himself holding a steamy cauldron of friction, competitor discontent and political pressures.

Brundage, retiring after 20 years of trying to hold the line against national pride and commercialism, pointed out the problems in a morning-after comment on the IOC decision in the Rhodesian-African controversy.

"It was a blatant intrusion of politics," the crusty, 84-year-old Chicago millionaire said of the vote to expel Rhodesia from the Munich Games rather than risk the walkout of African nations and sympathetic blacks, including some Americans.

Brundage said he battled to uphold Rhodesia, which he said met every condition of participation, but lost. "It's the first time in 20 years the committee has gone against me," he said sadly.

The discordant note raised by the expulsion of Rhodesia was echoed in the Olympic Village.

There, Olga Connolly, Czech-born discus thrower competing in her fifth Olympics, her fourth as an American, urged a reassessment of Olympic values.

"The value of medals should be de-emphasized," she said, "and the Olympics should return to the original intention of the games—world peace."

She announced she was organizing an Olympic Project for Peace and hoped to pin one of her three-inch red buttons on every athlete in the village.

Delayed a full day by the Rhodesian hassle, the vote for a new president of the IOC took place in secrecy with no announcement of the margin, by which Killanin, 58, a white-haired journalist, author and movie producer, beat his only rival, Count Jean de Beaumont of France.

Brundage made the announcement with Killanin at his side.

The new IOC president said he planned no sweeping changes but added, "There will be evolution." He immediately took issue with Brundage's stand on eliminating the Winter Games.

"I have no objection to the Winter Olympics, as long as they are properly run," he said.

Lord Killanin said he regretted "political interference" in the Rhodesia issue but added that he did "not take the view that our image has been seriously damaged."

Bell's Double Boosts Indians To 5th Straight

CLEVELAND (AP) — Buddy Bell knocked in three runs with a bases-loaded double in the seventh inning as the Cleveland Indians won their fifth straight American League baseball game with a 5-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins Wednesday night.

Allen's blow, coming as the Sox led 3-2, gave him 32 home runs and 91 runs batted in, both league-leading totals.

The Indians' rally helped them break open a close game after the Twins had cut their lead to 2-1 on Rich Reese's home run in the top of the inning.

Cleveland took a 2-0 lead in the sixth on Alex Johnson's sacrifice fly and an error that allowed Bell to score on the same play.

Steve Dunning, who allowed six hits in seven innings, won his third game in four decisions with relief help from Phil Hennigan. Minnesota's Dick Woodson, 11-11, was the loser.

NEW YORK (AP) — Four straight hits, including Tommy Helms two-run single, keyed a five-run fourth inning as the Houston Astros beat the New York Mets 7-4 in a National League baseball game Wednesday.

Jimm Wynn opened the inning with a single and went to third on Bob Watson's single. Doug Rader then doubled in one run and Helms singled home two. After Jesus Alou doubled Helms to third, Jerry Koosman, 8-0, was replaced by Gary Gentry.

The fourth run of the inning came in on Bob Stinson's sacrifice fly and the final one scored on Roger Metzger's two-out single.

Doug Rader's sacrifice fly and a single by Alou produced two Houston runs in the fifth.

The Mets scored three times off Larry Dierker, 12-7, in the eighth, one run coming on a force play and two on Ed Kranepool's homer. Luke Barnes doubled in New York's first run in the third.

Cards Coach Drulis Dies Of Attack

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Chuck Drulis, a defensive coach with the football St. Louis Cardinals who was credited with originating the safety blitz, died of an apparent heart attack Wednesday while the team was on a flight to Houston.

Dr. Fred Reynolds, the physician of the National Football League team, pronounced Drulis dead as the chartered Ozark Air Lines plane made an unscheduled stop at Little Rock.

The Cardinals were en route to Houston for Thursday night's preseason game with the Oilers in the Astrodome.

As defensive coach for the Cardinals, Drulis had Larry Wilson blitz opposing teams' quarterbacks during the 1961 season.

Among active coaches and assistants, only Weeb Ewbank of the New York Jets had more consecutive years in the NFL than Drulis, who was preparing to begin his 21st campaign and 16th with the Cardinals.

A native of Girardville, Pa., Drulis attended Temple University and played five seasons for the Chicago Bears, twice being named all-pro. He joined the Green Bay Packers for two seasons beginning in 1949 and was a player-coach the next year.

Drulis became a fulltime assistant coach for the Packers in 1951, then moved to the Philadelphia Eagles, before joining the Cardinals in 1956.

He served under coaches Ray Richards, Pop Ivy, Wally Lemm, Charley Winner and Bob Holway on the Cardinal staff.

Drulis is survived by his wife and two sons.

Blair's Homer Leads Orioles Past Angels 7-1

BALTIMORE (AP) — Paul Blair's three-run homer capped a six-run Baltimore rally in the fourth inning and the Orioles went on to whip the California Angels 7-1 Wednesday night behind 17-game winner Jim Palmer.

Blair's drive over the left field fence off loser Rudy May, 5-10, followed run-scoring singles by Andy Etchebarren and Mark Belanger and a successful squeeze bunt by Palmer.

The Orioles, who had scored just 11 runs while losing five of seven previous games, added a run in the sixth on a single by Tommy Davis, his first RBI as an Oriole.

Palmer, the only one of Baltimore's four 20-game winners of 1971 with a clear chance to do it again, allowed five hits and struck out nine. He has lost six.

The right-hander lowered his earned run average to 1.86. An error by second baseman Bobby Grich and singles by Ken Berry and Vada Pinson scored an unearned California run in the fifth.

The winners added two more runs in the sixth in retaliation for Holland's single tally in the fifth. Joliet finished the game with four big insurance runs in the seventh and held Holland scoreless in the final frame.

Joliet Pitcher Guides Squad Past Holland

FARMINGTON, N.M. (AP) — Joliet, Ill., relief pitcher Carl Foster insured his Connie Mack Baseball World Series victory Monday with a two-run homer in the fourth inning, as Joliet swamped Holland, Mich., 11-4, in the tourney's opening game.

Foster assumed mound duties for Joliet in the second inning, with Holland leading 3-0. The Illinois team evened the score with three runs in the top of the third, and Foster's homer pushed Joliet over the top for good.

The winners added two more runs in the sixth in retaliation for Holland's single tally in the fifth. Joliet finished the game with four big insurance runs in the seventh and held Holland scoreless in the final frame.

Holland went through three pitchers, with starter Bruce Fritsma going five innings for the loss.

Olympians Boost Fischer's Drive

BY MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Writer

MUNICH (UPI) — The two Russians sat there as if carved in stone, a perfect tableau of complete concentration.

They weren't kidding around. This was the McCoy. Some real heavy thinking.

You'd think they were sweating over some weighty international matter like, say, what to do about a suddenly uppity Egypt, but no, that wasn't it at all.

The chess board between them gave them away.

This whole thing took place outside the International Club, the spot in the Olympic Village where the competitors from all the different countries get together to hobnob, kid around and swap stories, and while these two Russians were playing, who do you suppose should happen to come along simply to kibitz.

You're right. A pair of U.S. athletes.

The Russians couldn't miss knowing which country they were from because of the red, white and blue U.S. emblems on the front of their uniforms, and finally, after watching the match a few minutes, one of the Americans pointed to the white king on the board, grinned and then needed the two Russians:

"Fischer! Bobby Fischer. You've heard of him, haven't you?"

The Russians laughed also. They couldn't help themselves.

The two kibitzers were Shep Messing and Neil Stam, both members of the U.S. soccer team, both from Long Island, N.Y.

They'll tell you right out they're big Bobby Fischer rooters, that being ahead as he is, he can't quit up there in Reykjavik the way he's threatening to, and that they hope he completely blots out Russia's Boris Spassky.

Messing and Stam are not alone.

Practically all the Olympic athletes say they're rooting for Fischer. Practically all, of course, except those here representing Russia.

They're pulling for Spassky. But from such divergent points as Australia, Italy, Japan, Canada, Sweden and West Germany you get this same thing from the great majority of the athletes:

"C'mon Fischer!"

They don't even care that he makes outrageous demands and that he strikes so many as being high-handed.

"The first thing I do when I pick up the paper is look to see whether Fischer won or lost," says Walter Mobinger, one of West Germany's gymnasts.

"All these things they say he does is the same like all used to do, but that doesn't matter to me. I like him. Besides, all people who compete in sports have certain characteristics. That's part of the way."

Shep Messing, one of those who teased the two Russian chess players, is a recent Harvard graduate who says what's wrong in wanting one of your own guys to wipe up the floor with the other guy? He says much of this generally advertised "good feeling" between U.S. and Russian competitors is manufactured anyway.

"I think there's a tremendous amount of animosity and natural rivalry between the U.S. and Russia and it's much healthier to express it in games like these instead of in war. You bet I'm for Fischer."

So is Dean Oldershaw, a member of Canada's canoeing team.

"I like Fischer. I don't hold those things he does against him. To me, that's just showmanship anyway. Look at what he has done for chess," he says.

One Russian water polo player, who could almost pass for Jerry Koosman of the Mels, says he has more interest in the Olympics than in what's going on in Reykjavik, but that he thinks Spassky will win eventually and he's rooting for him. Asked why, he replied:

"Because I'm Russian, the same as him."

But two Italian soccer players, Louis Benedetti and Peter Mennea, are completely for Fischer.

"I like his way," explains Mennea. "He's sure of himself. Showy, you know, typical American man."

"Yes," says Italy's Peter Mennea.

"But," he winks, "I like American women much better."

Which only goes to prove all those jokes they tell about Italians aren't true.

TOO MANY 'GATORS

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—A spokesman for the Wild Life and Fisheries Commission says Louisiana which has too many alligators may soon start exporting the giant reptiles for restocking purposes.

"The requests are coming in," assistant director Richard Yancey said Tuesday. "Publicity seems to have stimulated interest in the situation."

The Mississippi Game and Fish Commission's request for 65 alligators will be considered by the Louisiana Commission Aug. 29. Arkansas has already received 48 of the large reptiles and a request for 100 more was approved by the commission last Friday.

Ogilvie Seeks Agnew As Nixon Running Mate

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Illinois Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie gave high praise to Vice President Spiro T. Agnew in seconding Agnew's nomination Wednesday as President Nixon's running mate in the November election.

Ogilvie told the Republican National Convention that Agnew "has never wavered in his dedication, courage and, above all, his loyalty."

Ogilvie said he endorses Agnew because of the role the vice president played in the Nixon administration as special liaison between the President and the states.

He said Agnew established a "closer working relationship between the White House and the states than at any time in memory. He has triggered the results and he has responded to the people in the states."

Earlier in the day Ogilvie told newsmen that Nixon would amass three million votes in Illinois and carry the state for the Republicans.

Instead of the 134,960 vote margin that Nixon got in 1968 when he got 2,175,000 Illinois votes, Ogilvie predicted the President would accumulate a 700,000 plurality in November.

Ogilvie figured Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., would get more than the 2,039,814 votes received by Hubert Humphrey in 1968 because of the large number of young voters eligible to vote in 1972.

Nixon will be in Chicago on Thursday to speak before the American Legion national convention at McCormick Place on the city's lakefront.

Ogilvie said he was at a loss to explain his own sharp improvement in straw polls against his Democratic gubernatorial challenger Daniel Walker. "I don't know whether my popularity is increasing or the people are getting to know my opponent," Ogilvie commented.

The governor is still believed to be the underdog in his race with Walker.

GM Protests Traffic Safety Decision

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — General Motors Corp. announced Wednesday that the federal government had denied it a two-month reprieve from safety standards applicable to 1973 model cars.

The ruling by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, GM said, will assure the loss of 39,000 1973 model cars the company had hoped to build at its strikebound Norwood, Ohio, plant in the event of a settlement there.

In a statement issued Wednesday, George B. Morris Jr., GM vice president for industrial relations, said the NHTSA had declined to issue a two-month reprieve from 1973 new-car safety standards.

GM had made the request, Morris said, in the event the 139-day-old strike against the GM Assembly Division plant could be resolved soon.

The company wanted to produce the 39,000 additional 1972 models without certain bumper and flammability safety requirements which will be applicable to American cars built after Sept. 1. GM thus would have produced 1972 models up to Nov. 1, although had there been no strike, production of 1973 models would have begun the middle of August.

Morris did not put a dollar figure on the production loss. The plant produces Chevrolet Camaros and Novas and Pontiac Firebirds.

The Norwood strike began at the end of the second work shift April 7, and is the longest in General Motors' history. Issues include alleged assembly line speedup, seniority and overtime benefits.

Negotiations have been held almost daily since the strike began, but little progress has been reported.

The Norwood plant has been a frequent target of strikes, having been struck in 1958, 1961, 1964, 1967, 1970 and 1971.

RUNAWAY ELEVATOR

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—James Rafferty, 34, plunged 15 stories in a runaway elevator Tuesday and walked away from the accident.

Rafferty was dismantling part of the roof on an elevator cab at a hotel and the cab broke loose.

"I knew I had to get off my feet or the impact would kill me," he said.

He said he dropped to his back to spread the force of the landing. Seconds after the crash, he said, he got up and walked to a medical office where he underwent an examination.

"We can't find a thing wrong with him," Dr. Joseph McGuinness said.

Hull Files Suit

CHICAGO (AP) — Professional hockey, expanding this fall into two big league rivalries, was confronted Wednesday with a legal showdown between the long-established National Hockey League and the new World Hockey Association.

Specifically, the court hassle involves Bobby Hull and his former club, the Chicago Black Hawks against whom, and the NHL, Hull filed a counter suit Wednesday in Federal Court.

Hull, who has jumped from the Hawks to the Winnipeg Jets of the WHA, filed a suit charging that the NHL's "reserve clause" violates the Sherman Anti-Trust Act and monopolizes professional hockey.

Hull's action followed a suit filed Friday by the Black Hawks charging Hull with violating his Hawk contract by signing with the Jets.

The Hawk suit was filed in Circuit Court of Cook County, but was transferred Wednesday to the Federal Court which has jurisdiction of all Sherman Act cases. The two suits now are dovetailed for hearing under Federal Judge William J. Lynch, probably in September.

After filing his counter-suit, also asking unspecified triple monetary damages, Hull said: "I just want to play hockey, and I am disappointed that the Black Hawks have chosen to take their action against me and my family."

Hull's suit asserted the veteran NHL scoring great was under exclusive control of the Hawks since he was a 12-year-old Canadian amateur player.

Asking the court to declare the NHL's reserve clause a violation of the Sherman Act, the suit charged the NHL teams have entered into a "combination conspiracy and agreement... for any professional hockey team" outside the NHL.

When the Black Hawk suit was filed against Hull, club president William Wirtz said the action not only sought return of Hull but was filed for the good of the NHL. President Clarence Campbell of the NHL, said the Hawk stand was "loyal and honorable."

Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, charged that the GAO broke an appointment with his investigators Wednesday and refused to provide any cooperation on the case.

A spokesman for the GAO said its auditors were not trying to block the fact-gathering efforts of the committee's investigators.

The spokesman replied that the appointment had been scheduled when GAO thought its report would be ready on alleged irregularities in handling of nearly $500,000 in campaign funds by the Committee for the Re-election of the President.

The GAO spokesman said the conference with Patman's investigators did not occur because the report is not finished.

The Washington Star-News reported Wednesday that the GAO had held up publication of the report after receiving a request from Maurice H. Stans, Nixon's chief campaign fund raiser, to let the Republicans explain how the money was handled.

GAO Hinder Campaign Funds Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee chairman Wednesday accused the General Accounting Office of hindering his hunt for facts in connection with reported campaign finance law violations by Republicans.

Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, charged that the GAO broke an appointment with his investigators Wednesday and refused to provide any cooperation on the case.

formed newsmen the report had not been completed.

A GAO spokesman said Wednesday an official of the agency's elections office went to Miami Tuesday night to talk with "Stans and a number of people," then returned to Washington Wednesday with "new facts" which will be in the report.

But the spokesman denied that the report was being postponed because of the Republican National Convention.

Chanting Helps

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William Davis says he has a sure-fire way for the Los Angeles Dodgers to win the pennant.

Davis, veteran center fielder who has emerged as the team's leader with his bat and glove, doesn't speak of batting and fielding. He speaks of philosophy, religion and "Nam-yohoreng-kyo."

Over and over, he chants morning and evening, frequently during ball games—whenever an obstacle looms or an answer is needed.

He belongs to the Nichiren-Shoshu Buddhist sect, which has 1 million adherents worldwide, about 200,000 in the United States.

"It's really spreading," says the 32-year-old Davis. "Right now, three other guys on the team chant. I wish they all would chant, because if they did... Oh, Man! We'd win the pennant every year. That is, unless the other teams started to do it, too."

What does the chant mean? "It has a long meaning," says Davis, "but in so many words, it's important to say it."

Percy Hopes For Campaign Based On Issues

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Sen. Charles H. Percy of Illinois said Wednesday night he hopes his Republican party will not campaign on "personalities."

"In 1970 we overreacted," he said in an interview. "We ran a campaign. I wasn't proud of as a Republican."

Percy said he looks at Sen. George McGovern, the Democratic presidential candidate, "as a man of dignity."

"I would take him seriously," Percy said. "The issues are serious."

"But," he added, "I think if the elections were held now Nixon would be the overwhelming favorite of the American people."

And, he added, "I hope we wage the campaign on the issues."

WALK OFF JOBS

CHICO, Calif. (UPI)—Union employees walked off their jobs at a match manufacturing plant Tuesday to protest the firing of three persons for having long hair.

Officials at the Diamond International plant said the three employees were fired July 17 because "their hair style does not conform to company standards." The policy states that hair could not be below the collar.

About 170 members of the Workers' Union, Millmen's Union Local 1495 of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners walked off the job after attempts by a federal mediator to resolve the issue failed.

"I want to play for Winnipeg and I intend to take whatever steps are necessary to meet my commitment to the Jets, the hockey fans and the other players."

Hull's suit asserted the veteran NHL scoring great was under exclusive control of the Hawks since he was a 12-year-old Canadian amateur player.

The Washington Star-News reported Wednesday that the GAO had held up publication of the report after receiving a request from Maurice H. Stans, Nixon's chief campaign fund raiser, to let the Republicans explain how the money was handled.

GAO officials said Tuesday their report would be issued later that day, but then inand chant it, not what it means. It's the key; it opens up doors to your whole life.

"It's the true philosophy of life, it really is for everybody."

Davis has been hitting around .280, but "just knows" he'll be at .300 or better at season's end. Yet he won't measure success by statistics.

"It's only the end result that counts. By the end of the season, I expect to be hitting .300. But if I'm not, I won't be so disappointed, because I know there's a reason behind it."

Davis says it has helped him in all aspects of his life, including baseball. "I don't like to give examples. We all need different things in our lives to be happy. My examples wouldn't be important to anyone else, because they would have different ones."

Davis says his communication with others has improved. After a recent losing streak was broken, he made this point:

"The word on this team now is unity. Now we're all talking to each other, which is something we were not doing during that bad spell. If we stop talking, we stop winning."

He became involved in the sect after his wife, Jeanna, started chanting at home last year.

"I wasn't interested at first. But I watched her reactions—it made her seem to get herself together — and I had to try it. It was like discovering myself all over again."

Agnew Speech Of Acceptance

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, virtually unknown when he was nominated here four years ago, accepted renomination Wednesday night as a strong contender for the top of the Republican ticket in 1976.

Agnew, who was given a strong boost as a successor to her husband by Pat Nixon earlier in the day, told the convention delegates he regards himself as "the President's man," and heaped praise on the chief executive he hopes to serve under for four more years.

Agnew tied himself closely to President Nixon in his speech, picturing the President and vice president as a team bound together by mutual trust and loyalty.

He said also he views this office as having two functions of major importance—"to serve the President and to learn from the President."

Agnew said he has found his office sometimes uncomfortable and sometimes ego-diminishing. "But it is also quietly rewarding," he said. "Particularly if you serve with a great President, as has been my good fortune."

Agnew said Nixon's goal is to make the United States the best possible home for all Americans, without granting special favors or treatment to certain segments of the population.

(Editor's Note: Mike Blake now lives under an assumed name. His gambling problem forced him to move away from the Midwest city in which he had lived most of his adult life. That is true. So are the facts and incidents as related in the following two-part series. However, all the names have been fictionalized to protect Mr. Blake, who fears reprisals.)

(First of Two Parts.)

As Told to IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK — (NEA) — In the winter of 1967, I had the chance to buy a harness horse and jumped at it. I was a professional gambler. I bought the horse to increase my contacts so that I could make safer bets. And, hopefully, to bet on sure things.

For years I was like the average fan. I heard rumors about shenanigans in harness races. Now I was to find out for myself. In the tracks that I soon began to frequent, I found that in most of the eight to 10 races a night, deals were being made among the drivers.

Those drivers are still driving. They drive all over the country, in most or all of the 15 states and Canada that permit harness racing.

One night, my trainer-driver, Steve Fillmore, dragged my horse, High Step, a very mediocre pacer. He told me of his plans beforehand and I made a bundle. But I found that horse dopings are unusual because they are, first of all, too risky and, secondly, unnecessary.

The most common and frequent way to arrange a race is for two, three or four drivers to get together before the race and set it up. I was in on many of those.

A harness race is rarely completely fixed, in which all eight or nine drivers are involved. There are many drivers who have no price or if they do have a price, it has never been met to the best of my knowledge. But their cooperation isn't necessary. Usually just a couple drivers working together can eliminate an honest driver.

Harness racing is the fastest-growing spectator sport in the United States, according to the 1971 Gambler's Digest. Thirty million paying fans attended harness races last year. The figure will probably be higher this year. Very few of those 30 million really know what is going on right before their very eyes. But they suspect. For good reason.

When it becomes obvious that something has been happening, they make a noise. They did just that at Yonkers Raceway in New York, when a ridiculous low-paying exacta (picking the first two horses in one race) caused a minor riot by bettors. It happened again at Pocono Downs. Another absurdly low exacta, another riot by bettors. And at Louisville Downs, two drivers were suspended for one year for "trying to get together on a perfecta," according to William Hilliard, chairman of the Kentucky State Trotting Commission.

I owned High Step for six months. Though the horse was in my name only, I had a silent partner, Sal Torre. At the time, Sal could not obtain a license to buy a horse. He was not permitted on the grounds of any track in the state. He had been ejected a few weeks before when he was caught talking through a paddock window at a local track. He was a general patron then and general patrons are not allowed to talk to paddock people. I was happy to be a partner of Sal's. I knew he was always going down to the paddock before races for tips. What I came to learn was that he also received signals while sitting up in the stands.

I remember one night in particular. Sal's father, Nick, was driving in the race. Nick is a prominent driver. This night, Sal's father was driving Timmy's Boy. I was looking over the program and I said to Sal, "Timmy's Boy looks good to-night."

"Yeah," said Sal. "How heavy can I bet him?" "Wait a minute, I'll let you know."

As I found out later, Sal was waiting for the post-parade, when the horses come onto the track. Sal watched for a signal from his father. Then he said to me, "Bet your house." Timmy's Boy went off at 16-1 and I won $2,310.

I don't remember the specific signal for that race. But there were as many signals as there were races. Sal taught me them. He grew up in harness racing. Besides his father, his uncle is a prominent trainer-driver. So are his in-laws. And he spent his earliest days, people say, in a sulky instead of a buggy.

Sal would watch his father or another friendly driver; a whip under the right arm might mean to bet on the horse of that particular driver; a whip on the shoulder might mean to lay off that driver. Spitting to the left might mean one thing, spitting to the right something else like a third base coach. Almost anything was used short of turning a cap backwards.

If there was a "lay-off" or "don't bet on me" signal, Sal would often note the horse in front of the friendly driver. The friendly driver would make it his business to be behind the horse he knew was supposed to win. On at least 20 different occasions I bet the horse Sal's dad followed on the track for the post parade. I won every time.

Barr, McCovey Carry Giants Past Bucs, 8-0

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Right-hander Jim Barr tossed a two-hitter for his first major league shutout and Willie McCovey blasted a two-run homer, carrying the San Francisco Giants to an 8-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Wednesday in National League baseball.

Barr, 5-7, was staked to a 1-0 lead in the first. Bobby Bonds led off with a single, stole second, went to third on a sacrifice and scored on Dave Rader's sacrifice fly off Bob Moose, 9-8. Ken Henderson walked in the sixth and McCovey followed with his 10th homer of the season.

Barr, who struck out five en route to his fifth complete game of the season, retired the final 21 batters he faced after Willie Stargell and Milt May singled in the second inning. The Giants wrapped it up with four runs in the seventh and one more in the eighth.

Moose, Miller (7), Giusti (8) and May, Sanguinelli (7); Barr and Rader. W—Barr, 5-7; L—Moose, 9-8. HR—San Francisco, McCovey (10).

Broncos Eye First Ever Win Mark

(One in A Series)

DENVER (AP)—The 13th edition of the Denver Broncos, under new head coach John Ralston of Stanford University fame, still is in quest of a first winning season. But it appears that if they are going to top that .500 mark, it will have to come from the defense, again the running of Floyd Little and some innovative, productive tactics authored by Ralston.

There are a few changes from last year's 4-9-1 team, but one of the most notable is the No. 1 draft pick, tight end Riley Odoms from the University of Houston. Odoms, at 6-4 and 230 pounds is a punishing blocker with sure hands and bullish running ability.

Unfortunately, he arrives at a position that is probably the strongest on the team. Billy Masters, who became a starter in the fourth game, was the team's second leading receiver last year with 27 catches for 382 yards. Second-year man John Mosier also is rated highly, although he has little experience.

Jerry Simmons, with 25 catches for 403 yards and swift but oft-injured Dwight Harrison, a disappointment in his rookie year, are expected to be the principal candidates again for the problem wide receiver spot.

The quarterback situation is more confused than ever.

Don Horn, No. 1 until being injured midway through last season, is now battling it out for the starting spot with three others, including Steve Ramsey, who finished up the season. Eleven-year veteran Charley Johnson, acquired from the Oilers, is now in the running, and rookie Mike Ernst also is making a bid.

The Denver defense, one of the NFL's most underrated, could be even better this season if it doesn't have to be on the field so long. Starting ends Pete Duranko and Rich Jackson both are recovered from knee injuries that sidelined Duranko the entire regular season and Jackson the last half. They'll join Paul Smith and sophomore Lyle Alzado in the starting unit.

The secondary, which ranked third in the league in allowing just 141 yards per game via passing, is solid, with cornerbacks Leroy Mitchell and Billy Thompson two of the best around and sophomore Randy Montgomery pressing to break into the lineup. Nine-year veteran George Saimes will man free safety, with Charlie Greer at strong safety.

Linebacking is a question mark, although Fred Forsberg and Chip Myrtle have holds on two of the starting assignments.

Billy Van Heusen ranked fifth in the conference in punting with a 41.8 yard average, while Jim Turner was superb in the field goal department, booting 25 of 38 and ranking fourth in the AFC in scoring with 93 points.

Golf Designer Shows New Clubs

By F. RICHARD CICCONE

Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Butz once designed a golf set of 14 woods for entertainer Jackie Gleason who was having a bad case of "shanks" with his irons.

Gleason later straightened out his iron game but Butz says, "I saw Jackie last year in Florida and he said he still has the all-wood set and he'll drag it out if he ever has trouble again with his irons."

Butz, director of marketing and design for Victor Golf's

PGA Division, believe many average golfers prefer to hit woods instead of long irons because they can get the ball into the air easier.

That's why Butz and Victor have introduced a radically designed set of clubs that eliminates the 2-iron, includes driver,

3-wood, 5-wood and 7-wood;

each with more loft than standard clubs.

"We started out to design a club for the senior golfer, the man in his 50s and 60s who has lost a lot of his hand action and can't swing his body into a shot anymore," Butz says.

"But we found that these clubs are for any average golfer whose biggest problem is getting the ball into the air,"

Butz says.

"The standard driver has always had an 11-degree loft. No one ever changed it until now.

Our driver has a 13-degree loft.

Each wood accordingly has more loft and each iron up to the 5-iron has more loft."

To compensate for the shorter distance of a shot caused by

Butz added length to the shaft.

"This led to making the line of each club slightly flatter,"

One of the most important changes in the PGA clubs is the weight.

"All clubs are swing weight-

and "the average driver weighs

an ounce or a half-ounce lighter."

"This really helps the golfer who gets tired on the back nine. It makes it easier to control a swing for 18 holes," Butz

says.

"The whole concept of these clubs is to meet specific needs

tests show that this type of club, with lighter over-all weight results in shots that are hit further and straighter. We

strokes off anyone's game but they will make the game a lot more fun when a golfer can hit more shots in the air."

In place of the 2-iron, the Victor set includes a 7-wood which

the golfer who needs a long iron but can't hit them."

Of 2-irons, Butz says, "Most

a pond."

Jockey Brings Suit Against Racing Board

CHICAGO (AP)—Jockey

Lane Sure, suspended for five years for allegedly using an electric whip, Monday filed suit against the Illinois Racing

Board in Federal Court.

ing board did not give him a full hearing before suspending him from a position which earns him $90,000 annually, according to the suit.

On May 9, Suire's mount,

Little Solaris, fell and broke a leg in the third race at Hawthorne Park and had to be de-

for a week.

An electric whip was found near the fall and Ted Atkinson,

Hawthorne's chief steward,

filed charges against Suire. A hearing followed and the Hawthorne Stewards Association recommended suspension of Suire's license. The racing board then suspended Suire.

after prosecution witnesses tes-

his own witnesses, board members, with the exception of board chairman Alexander

MacArthur, walked out of the hearing room.

Suire also contended that while the defense was presenting its case, MacArthur made

jockey's guilt.

The suit, assigned to U.S.

Magistrate James T. Balog, asked the court for a full hear-

pension, and, pending the outcome, the court was asked to delay enforcement of the sus-

the South Vietnam government that died Quang Tri three months ago killed more than one-tenth of an enemy force in the mouth of the Que Son Valley, military reports said Wednesday.

Field reports said the South Vietnamese drove up the valley continued slowly. The 3rd Division, at that time known for its poor personnel, was routed from Quang Tri Province shortly after the North Vietnamese launched their offensive March 30.

At Da Nang, 17 enemy rockets and mortars wounded 11 civilians and destroyed five houses early Wednesday, the Saigon command reported. It was the third shelling in less than a week of South Vietnam's second largest city.

A marine squad entered the Citadel during the night through a bomb-damaged gap in the fortress wall but was driven back by small arms fire.

American B52 bombers dropped 1,200 tons of bombs in an arc within 15 miles west of Quang Tri and unloaded more than 200 more tons in the demilitarized zone just to the north in an effort to cut off enemy supplies.

Nixon's Gift Car To Brezhnev Has Yet To Be Seen In Moscow

By JOHN BAUSMAN

Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid I.

Brezhnev has yet to make a

President Nixon gave the Communist party chief three months ago.

Western diplomats say they

car in use. A Soviet car buff said he, too, had never seen it or heard of its being spotted.

The Soviet enthusiast knew of the Cadillac only through West-

Nixon during his visit to Mos-

Soviet press.

himself, may be enjoying the Cadillac at his vacation retreat on the Black Sea or on restricted roads around his dacha outside Moscow, away from the eyes of foreigners and Muscovites.

For driving around Moscow

the party's general secretary usually is loyal to home industry and uses a Soviet ZIL, which incidentally happens to be designed along the lines of the Cadillac's competitor, the Lincoln Continental.

Brezhnev has also been equally careful about being seen in the Citroen-Maserati President Georges Pompidou of France gave him last October.

French sources report he is delighted with that speedster.

The only foreign car that Brezhnev has been seen using around Moscow is a Rolls Royce, which he appears to like very much and even drives himself.

There may be a historical reason. Lenin, the founder of the Soviet Union, rode in Rolls Royces.

COMPANY FORMED

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—A company has been formed to freeze bodies of fee-paying clients for hundreds of years until a cure is found for whatever killed them and they can be brought back to life, the firm's president said Tuesday.

Art Quafie, head of the company, said it was set up by nine of the 30 members of the Bay Area Cryonics Society and has about $10,000 capital.

Quafie estimated the cost of freezing a body and storing it below ground in a tube 320 degrees below zero at between $15,000 to $20,000 but said the cost would go down as the idea caught on.

Quafie said he and three friends drove to Miami Beach from California in Kovic's car, a special model, with hand controls.

"I taught the other brothers who were riding with me how to use the hand controls," he said. "It's really easier than driving with your feet."

Kovic said the things that have meant most to him in Miami Beach "are the little things, like people helping me into the shower and helping me get my trousers on."

"I really appreciate it and try to help them whenever I can. I'm really pretty self-sufficient and I'm not trying to play the cripple role."

The resolution also said that the "legal machinery of the federal government be utilized to investigate and prosecute any and all of such individuals."

Miss Fonda and Clark both visited North Vietnam recently and criticized American bombing of North Vietnamese dikes.

The resolution and the general mood of the convention seemed to indicate that Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern, scheduled to address the convention Thursday, would receive a cool if polite reception—a sharp contrast to the rousing reception expected to be given Vice President Spiro Agnew when he addresses the convention on Friday.

Women lost another round at the convention Tuesday, when delegates voted to continue their "men only" membership policy.

A $10,000 suit has been filed in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C. to force the VFW to admit women.

VFW delegates also adopted resolutions:

—Supporting President Nixon's policies in Southeast Asia.

—Calling for humane treatment of Prisoners of War.

—Asking that the United States not complete withdrawal of troops from Southeast Asia "until a satisfactory resolution of the POW issue has been achieved."

Wheelchair Vet Leads 'Brothers' In War Protests

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) —

In 1968, Ron Kovic was leading a U.S. Marine patrol when a North Vietnamese bullet sliced through his spine.

Four years later, Kovic is in a wheelchair leading his Vietnam veteran "brothers" on marches against the war.

"I came here to once and for all expose to the American people and the people of the world the crime of this war," said Kovic Wednesday as he sat in Flamingo Park at the Vietnam Veterans Against the War campsite.

Around the 26-year-old Los Angeles resident, thousands of young protesters here for the Republican National Convention made plans for massive demonstrations at the convention's final session.

Kovic said he served in Vietnam with the Marines from December 1965 to January 1967, and from September 1967 through January 1968.

On Jan. 20, 1968, he was the point man for a Marine company that walked into a North Vietnamese ambush, he said.

One bullet hit him in the foot, and another ripped through his shoulder and a lung and severed his spine.

"One Marine was killed trying to get to me, and a black brother finally reached me and saved my life," Kovic said.

He and two other veterans in wheel chairs have been the point men for VVAW protest marches throughout the week. The three crippled veterans were taken inside Republican headquarters at the Fontainebleau Hotel Tuesday to deliver a protest letter to GOP leaders.

"To tell you the truth, I was a bit apprehensive about coming here, because being a paraplegic means you've got a lot of hassles," said Kovic, who is paralyzed from the waist down. "You have no control over your bowels or your bladder, and just from lying around you can get sores that last up to two months."

But he says that living in a tent in the park, sleeping in a bedroll, and eating free meals has been a pleasant experience thanks to the help he's gotten from other protesters.

Kovic said he and three friends drove to Miami Beach from California in Kovic's car, a special model, with hand controls.

"I taught the other brothers who were riding with me how to use the hand controls," he said. "It's really easier than driving with your feet."

Kovic said the things that have meant most to him in Miami Beach "are the little things, like people helping me into the shower and helping me get my trousers on."

"I really appreciate it and try to help them whenever I can. I'm really pretty self-sufficient and I'm not trying to play the cripple role."

The chance America now has to lead the way to a lasting peace may never come again, let us have the vision and the courage to seize the moment and meet the challenge before it slips away."

In the concluding sentences of his address the President said:

"I ask you, my fellow Americans, to join in our new majority not just in the cause of winning an election but in working together to achieve a goal that has been the dream of mankind since the beginning of civilization. Let us build a peace which our children and all children of the world can enjoy for generations to come."

While Nixon focused his attacks on McGovern's proposals, he put in a dig at the Democrats' vice-presidential switch.

Speaking of his running mate, Agnew, Nixon said: "I thought he was the best man for the job four years ago. I believe he is the best man for the job today. And I am not going to change my mind tomorrow."

In the 3,200-word address, Nixon discussed discrimination, welfare and crime.

"Let us commit ourselves," he declared, "to continue relentlessly to remove the last vestiges of discrimination in America. But the way to end discrimination against some, is not to begin discrimination against others."

WRIGLEY HEIR DIES OF GUNSHOT WOUND

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — Wrigley Sullivan, 38, one of the heirs to the Wrigley chewing gum fortune, has died of an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Police Chief Virgil Stuart said Sullivan was found shot lying across a bed at his home Sunday. A small-caliber revolver was found near the body. He died in a Jacksonville hospital a short time later.

Sullivan's mother was a member of the Wrigley family.

Daley

At least 10 "and possibly more" members of the 35-member executive council favor McGovern, Johnson said.

Under the federation's rules affiliate unions may go contrary to the neutrality policy, but subordinate AFL-CIO bodies, such as state federations, may not.

The Illinois AFL-CIO several weeks ago endorsed the entire Democratic state ticket, but remained neutral on the presidential race because of the national federation's stand.

At that meeting, Johnson blocked an effort by McGovern supporters to voice opposition to the union's national policy of neutrality and to demand that the council reconsider its action, which denied the Democratic presidential nominee organized labor's support.

The state AFL-CIO has more than 1.1 million members in 4,500 locals representing 112 international organizations.

Should the national executive council open the way for subordinate bodies to endorse presidential candidates, Johnson said the Illinois federation would most likely back McGovern.

"I would guess that most of the membership, especially in the more active sections of the state would prefer McGovern," Johnson said, categorizing the choice one "between the lesser of two evils."

Although long an opponent of President Richard M. Nixon, Meany has been incensed with McGovern since the Democratic National Convention, at which many labor leaders felt they were not given an adequate role to play.

Since the convention and the executive council's decision to remain neutral, however, more than two dozen unions in the federation, including 10 which have representatives on the executive council, have backed McGovern, Johnson said.

The state AFL-CIO is scheduled to meet Sept. 25 in Chicago and Johnson said if national restrictions are lifted the delegates will choose whether or not to make an endorsement.

Protesters Harass Delegate And Wife

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) —

Demonstrators outside the Republican National Convention caused a few harrowing moments for Wisconsin GOP State Chairman John Hough and his wife.

"I was never so scared in my life," Mrs. Hough said Wednesday in describing harassment of delegates outside Convention Hall Tuesday night.

Mrs. Hough said she and her husband were returning to the hall from dinner when one member of a group of youths shouted, "Hey, here's a delegate, here's a delegate."

"I tried to cover John's credentials, but I couldn't," she said. "They were trying to grab his badge. We just kept walking and they kept shouting obscenities."

Some of the youths, Mrs. Hough said, had painted their faces white while others had red paint on their bodies.

Hough, a Jamesville businessman, said plainclothes security personnel prevented possible violence.

"It was a pretty unpleasant thing," Hough said. He described the youths, who were demonstrating against the war, as "a mob of nondelegate protesters."

Most of the Wisconsin delegates managed to avoid confrontations with protesters by taking a bus to and from the Convention Hall. Houghs traveled by car Tuesday night.

Atty. Gen. Robert Warren, delegation chairman and veteran observer of antiwar protest in Madison, said he thought Miami demonstrations were relatively mild.

"People who don't live in Madison may not know how violent protests can get," Warren said.

Urges Pentagon Paper Jungle Defoliation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jokes aside, says a member of the House Armed Services Committee, it's time to defoliate the Pentagon's paper jungle.

There are 11,916 separate paper forms in use at the Pentagon, says Rep. Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., most of which are seldom read but which consume "a fantastic amount of wasted time, effort and money."

In a letter Tuesday to Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., the committee chairman, Pike urged "a major investigation of the paper jungle which is costing both our military and our taxpaying citizens so very dearly."

He said the situation is so bad that it has given rise to such jokes as: "An aircraft carrier is ready to launch only when it weighs as much as the paper it took to build it," and, "No military plane has ever been built which could lift the paper it took to make it fly."

Pike cited the case of a prospective manufacturer of a simple felt washer who was given plans, specifications and forms which "weighed seven and one-half pounds, and some of them were on microfilm."

During committee hearings into military manpower needs, Pike said the Pentagon was asked to provide one copy of every standard form in use.

"The forms alone totaled 11,916, occupy nearly a hundred square feet and weigh more than 200 pounds," he said.

He said "hundreds of millions of man-hours are wasted each year in filling out pieces of paper... other hundreds of millions of man-hours are wasted in sorting, filing and storing them," but relatively little time is spent reading them.

Professor Calls For Equal Time, Money For Men

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A Women's Studies program is funded at the University of New Mexico, and a male professor says that what's good for the goose is good for the gander.

Dr. Richard F. Tomasson, chairman of the Sociology Department, who says he's changed at least 50 per cent of his three kids' diapers, is calling for equal time and equal money for the men.

He said the idea of a Women's Studies is "absolutely silly," but if the women are going to have it, the men should too.

He's submitted his proposed curriculum for Men's Studies, complete with courses covering the "Mythology of Male Superiority" and "The Legal Status of American Men," to the university curriculum committee. But he said he hasn't received an official response.

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
NEW YORK (UPI) — Are contemporary eggheads brighter than those of yesteryear? Permissive Grades. But what about the growing other factors? Given two numbers running up records of students with the same excellent nearly straight A's or A minus? lent grades, comments from Billman suggested that the faculty may swing the selective evaluations by teachers aren't toward one and away from the what they used to be in many other places.

He said a minority of scholastically elite on many teachers, in fact perhaps a few campuses faces a problem in every college or university, similar to that occurring at "are determined to destroy the Dickinson College in Carlisle, grading method" by giving A's to everyone. According to Billman such faculty members want to usher in the era of "no distinction among people." The pass-fail system, to some extent, works toward the same goal. There is no good, better, best.

Billman, a graduate of Harvard and secretary of Phi Beta Kappa since 1946, explained that on campuses where there are large numbers of students with Phi Beta Kappa standard grades, extra evaluation procedures are added to the selection process.

The Dickinson Dilemma
The Phi Beta Kappa selection process at Dickinson begins with students who have earned a 3.5 grade average (the top is 4.0). A 3.5 once assumed membership in the Phi Beta Kappa, according to Prof. Frederick Ferre, president of the Dickinson unit. But today a 3.5 doesn't guarantee anything regarding selection, Ferre said. When the dust had settled at throughout life to continue that society's admission standard level of achievement. Ferre may come in the summer of 1974 at the triennial meeting of the Phi Beta Kappa council of Billman said revision of the chapters.

We must make sure that the key doesn't lose its meaning," the Phi Beta Kappa council of Billman said revision of the chapters.

An analysis of grade trends at Dickinson showed what's happening there—and probably at other colleges. The grade of C was given with half the frequency of the grade of B. And the grade of A was assigned more frequently than was the grade of C.

"... It is clear that if this trend continues it is now or soon will be impossible to recognize outstanding work on the basis of grade averages," the Dickinson chapter reported. "It becomes particularly urgent that no one be misled into expecting that distinctions can be given on the basis of grades that fail to distinguish."

"The key is a symbol of distinction, of having been set apart by one's own hard work, which should be a challenge

Austrian Embroidery Should Hold Its Own

By PAUL LENDVAI
London Financial Times—UPI
VIENNA—Though 1972 is shaping up as a difficult year, the smallest Austrian industry—embroidery—in the smallest Austrian province will certainly retain its proud position as the country's most export-oriented industrial branch.

About 95 per cent of the output of the highly specialized embroidery industry, situated in the tiny province of Vorarlberg, bordering on Switzerland and West Germany, is sold abroad. Production last year passed, for the first time, the $42 million mark and exports reached a peak only slightly less.

For two centuries embroidery has been inextricably linked with this scenically beautiful area. Ever since 1763 when the first embroiderer settled there, the making and exporting of embroidery has played an important role in the prosperity of Vorarlberg industry long dominated by textiles. Before the increasingly complicated machines replaced manual work, every tenth inhabitant in the province was a full-or part-time embroiderer.

Today the embroidery industry has a total production staff of only 2,500 on a two shift schedule. Yet one-eighth of the world production capacity in this sector is located in Vorarlberg, more precisely in three towns—Lustenau, Hohenems and Altach.

The industry currently operates about 1,000 large embroidery machines out of a grand total of 8,500 units in operation throughout the world.

The industry's sales abroad account for 15 per cent of the total Austrian textile exports and no less than 40 per cent of the textile exports from the province. Between 1961 and 1971 foreign sales almost doubled. West Germany and Britain are by far the most important buyers.

A detailed breakdown reveals that embroidery from Vorarlberg can be found all over the world from Israel to Qatar, and from Bolivia to New Zealand. In addition to Germany and Britain the most important buyers are Singapore, Switzerland, Lebanon, Belgium, Hong Kong, Japan and Australia.

Unlike the oldest and nearest competitor, the Swiss embroidery industry, Vorarlberg in 1970-71 did not suffer export setbacks and its foreign sales last year were some $4 million above those of the Swiss.

Dickey Employs Poetic Spinoffs

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Novelist, film scriptwriter, literary critic, teacher, lecturer, and actor all are among the roles James Dickey has filled. But as far as Dickey himself is concerned his primary job is being a poet.

"Poetry is the center of my creative wheel," Dickey, an amiable 49-year-old who towers 6 feet 4, says. "Everything else is a spinoff. All the other things come out of my poetry at some weird angle."

Dickey, winner of the National Book Award in Poetry for his "Buckdancer's Choice" and currently poet in residence at the University of South Carolina, cites his novel "Deliverance" as an example of poetic spinoff.

"I first thought of it as a long poem that would explore the themes of violence, action and sex," he says. "I wrote on it for a while but got nothing published."

"Then I decided that what I had was not poetic material but novel material. So I turned 180 degrees and wrote a novel. Actually, I don't know anything about writing novels. I guess it just was a story that told itself very well."

When it was decided to make the book into a film, Dickey got the screenwriting chore. "I did it in about three months," he says, shaking his head, "and it was tough. Movies are really tough to get all together. What I did was to take the book and lay it out on my desk and look at it while trying to figure out what would work in visual images."

Writing the novel and script wasn't the end of Dickey's involvement with "Deliverance." He also has a small part in the film—playing a county sheriff. "It wasn't much," he says with a smile. "I sort of just acted myself."

Dickey began writing poetry while serving overseas during World War II. "I was lonely," he says, "so I read a lot. Then I started writing poetry to relieve my own loneliness. What I wanted to do after all that reading was to see if I couldn't get in there and do some of it myself."

After discharge, he taught English at universities and kept on writing poetry while his reputation slowly grew. "I came up the hardest possible way," he recalled. "By submitting unsolicited manuscripts. I knew no one in publishing so I'd just finish something up, send it off, and hope it would get published."

Dickey, who has published several books of poetry as well as some volumes of criticism, says he currently has "a lot of new stuff" he is working on. "I've got a new book of poems about half-finished," he says. "It'll be called 'Slowly Toward Hercules.' Then I've got another novel going called 'Anilam.' If anyone wants to know what it's about tell them it's about blind men and airplanes. I've also got another book of literary criticism working."

"There's just an awful lot to do."

Push To Improve Programming, End Ads On Children's TV Shows

BY ALEXANDER HIGGINS
Associated Press Writer

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — A four-year-old fight by a group of Massachusetts mothers aimed at improving the quality of the television programs their children watch has forced removal of prayers from orange juice commercials and cancellation of certain vitamin pill advertising.

There have been other victories for the mothers, who call themselves Action for Children's Television—ACT—but they say their children still see too many commercials and programs to which they should not be subjected.

"It's time for America to realize children are special in the TV they watch," Peggy Charren, ACT chairman, said in an interview.

And to that end the group is continuing its campaign for an end to commercials on children's programs and an improvement in network programming.

ACT, a privately funded pressure group, has been to bat several times before federal agencies. Last fall they told the Federal Trade Commission—FTC—and Federal Communications Commission—FCC—that one commercial used during the children's program "Romper Room" on one television station said, in part:

BROWN CO. COUPLE WIN AWARDS FOR HORSES AT FAIR

MT. STERLING — A Mt. Sterling couple, Mr. and Mrs. Rolla Colclasure, repeated past performances in again taking awards at Illinois State Fair. Their three year old mare, an Appaloosa, won two awards in the Land of Lincoln classes.

The mare won reserve champion in the Open class, open to all horses and also in the Grand Champion class, for horses bred and born in Illinois. The Colclasures raise Appaloosas on their farm near Mt. Sterling.

More for police
FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI)—Kentucky Gov. Wendell Ford has asked the federal Pay Board to allow 2,600 state policemen a 15 per cent pay raise authorized by the 1972 General Assembly. The Pay Board has prohibited raises of more than 5.5 per cent, but Ford sought special consideration on grounds "this is a unique state response to the problem of upgrading local law enforcement agencies."

"God is great, God is good, let us thank him for our food; and now you may drink your Tropicana Orange Juice from the Pleasant Hill Dairy."

The commercial is no longer shown, and the producers of the popular nationwide program have made several format changes.

Another action ACT had sought was taken July 18 when it was announced that three major drug companies—Miles Laboratories, Bristol-Myers and Hoffman-LaRoche—had agreed to withdraw vitamin pill ads from children's programs by Oct. 1.

At FTC hearings last year, ACT had said that iron-fortified vitamin pills were being sold on TV "just like candy," despite medical warnings that too much iron can lead to coma and death.

Mrs. Charren called the actions of the drug companies "socially responsible." But she and other mothers, who began their drive on a shoestring budget in a living room, are far from satisfied with the format of children's television programs.

They have urged the FTC and FCC to end all advertising on these programs on the grounds the commercials are unfair and misleading.

They say they are concerned about the effect commercials have on children as well as the effect commercials have on the programs themselves.

Mrs. Charren says the Association of National Advertisers was wrong when it declared that advertising directed "to children for products and services which are used and consumed by children is appropriate in a society and economy such as ours."

ACT has concluded that the only "reason there is violence on children's television is because it sells. The Neilson ratings show that action attracts large audiences."

As a result they don't expect any revolutionary changes in network programming until federal agencies step in and take action.

For that reason, Mrs. Charren said, ACT has petitioned the FCC to declare children's television a public service and has asked the agency to set aside a minimum number of hours per week during which networks must produce programs for children. They ask that no commercials be carried.

Some forward steps have been taken, Mrs. Charren said. She said some local stations, including the Post-Newsweek stations in Washington and Florida, now cluster their ads at the beginning and end of children's shows. And the National Association of Broadcasters has instituted new rules which will reduce from 16 to 12 the number of minutes per hour allowable for advertising during programs aimed at children.

As for the new fall lineup of children's programs to be offered by networks, ACT says it offers little different from years past. Of the 15 hours of network programming on Saturday morning this fall, 80 per cent will be animated.

"There are almost no live people on children's TV this fall," Mrs. Charren said. "Besides that, almost every program is based on another."

ACT's founders say the quality of children's programming will change only if parents keep pushing for change. They say they'd like "to get parents to pay as much attention to the TV set as they do to the stove." And, of course, they'd like more volunteers for their cause, one which now has 1,000 members. They also are seeking more money to feed their efforts.

Two $5,000 grants from the Ford Foundation helped ACT conduct seminars in 1970 and 1972. All operations have been greatly expanded since receipt last year of a $164,500 grant from the Markoe Foundation.

BROWN CO. GIRLS ENTER STUDENT NURSING SCHOOL

MT. STERLING—Two Brown County High School graduates, Jane Kassing and Janelle Hulvey, are enrolled as freshmen at St. John's Hospital School of Nursing at Springfield. They started preliminaries on Aug. 21st.

Miss Kassing is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Kassing and Miss Hulvey's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Dean Hulvey, all of Mt. Sterling. Both young ladies graduated from BCHS this year.

LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—Michigan, the first state to rate its industrial parks, now has 42 certified industrial parks, reports the State Department of Commerce.

Three new Class A industrial parks made the total when they were certified recently. They include the Soo Industrial Park at Sault Ste. Marie, the Ft. Custer Industrial Park at Battle Creek and the Novex One at Novi.

Fingerprinting's 100th Anniversary Draws Near

CHICAGO (UPI)—Not everyone will feel inclined to cheer, but the world of law enforcement is nearing an important milestone—the 100th anniversary of the fingerprint check.

Although the human hand had been examined closely through the centuries no one apparently had thought to compare one individual's fingerprints against another's until two Englishmen began taking note of the differences in ridges, loops and swirls.

Remarkably, these men in the 1870s were engaged in independent studies thousands of miles apart. Moreover, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, each described his investigation in letters published in a British scientific journal in 1890.

William Herschel had been using a fingerprint method in connection with his official duties with the Indian civil service in Bengal. Henry Faulds, associated with a Tokyo hospital, had been studying fingerprints baked into the surface of pottery and reported on a method of taking fingerprints with printer's ink.

Faulds' System

Faulds anticipated the identification of criminals by their fingerprints and his inky-finger methods used today by police departments and other agencies all over the world.

Another Englishman, Sir Francis Galton, began putting Herschel's and Faulds' observations through scientific scrutiny, and his subsequent reports served as the technical basis for the two major fingerprint classification systems.

One system, published in 1900 by Sir Edward R. Henry, was first used by Scotland Yard in 1901. It was adopted immediately by scores of law enforcement agencies. The other classification system, devised by Juan Vucetich of Argentina, was published in 1904. It achieved prominence in Latin-American countries.

Many additional systems of fingerprint classification have been devised in the years since, and all incorporate principles of the Henry or Vucetich systems, or both, but none has attained wide acceptance.

FBI Fingerprint File

Fingerprint files were set up in the United States a few years after the turn of the century. Two of these files, operated by the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., and by the International Association of Chiefs of Police at Washington, D.D., were consolidated to form the nucleus of the present file maintained by the FBI.

The FBI files now contain the fingerprints of more than 75 million persons and approximately 14,000 contributing agencies forward more than 27,500 fingerprint records to these files daily. The FBI, with some modification, uses the Henry system, which was adopted by Scotland Yard more than 70 years ago.

There have been vigorous attempts to challenge the validity of the fingerprint system, but all have failed as scientific study proved that fingerprints afford an infallible means of identification—and everyone has a set.

NOODLE ALARM

BANGKOK (UPI) — Police tripped the alarm system at a bank in a rural town outside Bangkok recently in a test to see how long it would take police to arrive. The only response was a small boy carrying a bowl of noodles.

Investigation revealed that the police station where the alarm buzzer was located was next door to a noodle shop and that bank employees had arranged with the police to use the system to order their lunch.

ARC Starts 1972-73 Year

The Jacksonville Area Chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons held its first meeting of the 1972-1973 year, at the YMCA, Friday afternoon, Aug. 18. Anyone over 55 is eligible and welcome to join. Dues are payable at the next meeting Sept. 15.

Rev. Eugene N. Wisely, newly elected president presided at a brief business meeting.

The feature of the afternoon was a showing of slides, taken by Edward Trask, while employed on an American Aid Program for Greece. He was an engineer, assisting the Greeks to procure adequate water supply from their arid land.

The slides featured detailed views of the ageless Acropolis and Parthenon. (For those who cannot go to see the original Parthenon, an exact replica stands in a park in Nashville, Tennessee, well within the reach of America's far roving tourists.)

One slide showed a man wearing the traditional pantolon costume. This was followed by scenes showing Greek men dressed in today's American styles. Mr. Trask stated the modernization of dress was due to association with Englishmen aiding Greece and later with Americans giving government assistance.

After the meeting, there were refreshments and an informal social period.

The only real disadvantage of the Stayman two-club convention is that an alert opponent may double the artificial two-club bid for lead directing purposes.

Not that we approve of East's double of two clubs with only four clubs to the king-jack. Should South have elected to pass and North to redouble, North would have made at least two odd and probably managed to collect an overtrick but South did bid two spades and was promptly put in three no-trump by North.

Three no-trump did not fare very well. South finessed dummy's 10 of clubs at trick one. Back came a spade with West's king dropping dummy's singleton queen. Another club finesse saw dummy's queen dropping to East's king. Back came a spade. South's 10-spot finesse was covered by West's jack and a third club was led.

Dummy's ace had to be played. South went after diamonds by the normal play of leading to his ace and finessing the jack. That lost to the queen and East cashed his last club for two tricks down.

If South had stopped to think at trick one he would have brought home his contract in spite of losing the diamond finesse. He should have gone right up with dummy's ace of clubs and gone after diamonds at trick two.

East would take his queen and lead back a spade but South would clatter with his ace and cash out his red suit winners. Four diamonds plus three hearts plus two black aces would come to the magic number of nine.

What do you do now?
 A—Pass. Your partner has either gone crazy or is trying to get to a spade slam. Your spades are too weak for any further bid.

TODAY'S QUESTION
 Instead of bidding four spades, your partner has bid four hearts over your four diamonds. What do you do now?

The school, located in the Congregational Church at 520 W. College Ave. and the Annex of the Grace United Methodist church at 400 W. Morgan offers a structured program for mentally retarded individuals ineligible for other educational or training areas in their community. In addition to their mental retardation many of the students at Pathway have other handicaps such as cerebral palsy, epilepsy, blindness, severe brain damage and hyperactivity.

Pathway serves children who have reached the age of 2½ by December 1 of the school year. The age limit extends into young adulthood. Students attend Pathway from Morgan, Cass, Scott, Brown, Pike, Greene, Sangamon, and Macoupin Counties.

Pathway is sponsored by the Jacksonville Area Association for Retarded Children (JAARC).

JAARC was incorporated in 1964 as a not-for-profit organization. Membership to JAARC is open to all parents or guardians of the mentally retarded and any persons interested in the welfare of the mentally retarded.

Pathway School is funded in part by a Department of Mental Health Grant-in-aid. This year's Grant-in-aid is in the amount of $36,000. To receive the full amount the school must show at least an equal amount of money locally. Sources of local money include: tuition from public school districts for school aged students, JAARC membership dues, donations from organizations, donations from individuals, and memorial gifts.

School is held 9:30 a.m.-2:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. This year's session begins August 30th and will continue until the last of May. Pathway's vacations coincide with those of School District 117.

This year Pathway will be staffed by four full time teachers, four full time assistant teachers, one full time teacher's helper, a full time cook, a full time secretary, and an Executive Director.

The school participates in the reduced price-free school lunch program and serves a hot lunch daily. Lunches are 20 cents per day for students.

Registration for all students was Wednesday, August 23rd in the basement of the Congregational Church.

Anyone wishing more information about Pathway or anyone knowing of a child not in a program who might be eligible for Pathway may call Nancy Mawson, Director of Pathway. The office number is 245-9125. Anyone wishing to visit the school is invited to call also, so arrangements can be made.

Agnew Works On Acceptance Speech, Tennis

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Hours away from being renominated for a second term as Vice President, Spiro T. Agnew remained secluded today, working on his acceptance speech and his tennis game.

Cloistered within a walled estate lent to the Agnew family by a wealthy Miami Republican, Agnew kept out of the public view as the GOP National Convention conducted its business and renominated President Nixon Tuesday.

Agnew's hour will come tonight when Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton will place his name in nomination.

The vice president has been spending most of his time on the tennis courts, polishing his address to the convention, and seeing only close friends and associates.

Vic Gold, Agnew's press secretary, said that beyond the Vice President's appearance before the convention tonight with the President, Agnew would have no other public activities today.

Gold said, however, that Agnew would hold a post-convention news conference Thursday morning, presumably to discuss the Republican campaign.

Findley Approves Of GOP Convention

BY JOHN POWER

MIAMI BEACH — Paul Findley finds this year's Republican Convention a great source of satisfaction.

The veteran House member, serving as delegate from Illinois 20th Congressional District, is "pleased with the convention is most respects." He stated Wednesday night, "There has been less in the way of demonstrations than I had expected."

It had been rumored that Findley would be nominated for Vice-President, but this was squelched when Findley made it clear he didn't want to be considered, and the man who wanted to make the nomination failed to appear as a delegate.

Findley is up for re-election to the seat he has held for 12 years. "I plan my political career two years at a time, enjoy the work I am doing now, and have no plans to seek any other office."

The Pittsfield Republican supported the Steiger amendment to the rules committee proposal on apportionment of delegates. The amendment would have granted delegates based on broad republican strength in a state and would have entailed a system whereby states get more delegates based mainly on their deliverance of presidential electors to the Republican nominee.

"The Steiger amendment failed, but Findley still regards the rules the convention adopted as an 'improvement.'"

Findley backs the Nixon-Agnew ticket wholeheartedly; he sees Agnew as an "unknown quantity" in the 1976 convention arena. "Agnew's changed a lot in the last four years, and he will probably change even more by 1976. He has much support among the delegates in the hall now, but 1976 is a long way off."

Findley supported Percy as favorite son nominee for president several years ago, "but we'll know better after the November elections how strong a vote-getter he may be."

"Percy is one of the activists in the Congress, and I believe he has a great following in the nation, as well as Illinois. I respect and usually agree with Sen. Percy and believe he takes his stands out of absolute conviction," observed the delegate.

As for the state ticket's chances in November, Findley thinks "Ogilvie's chances are improving steadily, but he's still an underdog. He's not a razzle-dazzle candidate, but I think that's good. His support is less dramatic, but more solid."

Mike Howlett is the hardest to beat, but I think the Nixon-Percy strength will substantially influence the fate of the state ticket."

Findley praised the agriculture section of the platform. "It has no reference to the outdated parity concept, and it states the party support of the free market system and minimum of government interference. It very wisely includes no pledge of artificial pricing by the government."

Others serving from Illinois 20th Congressional District at the Republican Convention include Delegate R. Hap Northern of Quincy, and Alternates Eric Davis of Jacksonville and Josephine K. Oblinger of Sherman.

Jaycees First To Endorse City Manager Form

The Jacksonville Jaycees became the first organization to endorse the city manager form of government which will be placed before the voters at a special referendum on October 3.

Jacksonville residents will decide at that time whether to adopt a city manager form of government and change from 14 aldermen and a mayor to four aldermen, elected at-large, and a mayor, all five to take part in hiring a professional manager for the operation of all aspects of city government.

The Jaycees' endorsement of the new form of city government came during the regular meeting held Tuesday evening. The civic organization is also expected to support the referendum by volunteer efforts to get the vote out and in other ways.

Lee Roy Jackson, Jr., chairman of the citizen committee promoting the new form of city government, is a former national winner in the Jaycee Speak-Up contest.

Plans for the support of the referendum will be announced later.

Beardstown Man Dies Wednesday; Believed Suicide

BEARDSTOWN — Floyd Taylor, 315 E. Fourth St., was found dead at his home at 1:30 a.m. Wednesday by city police. Taylor, 25, was the victim of an apparent self-inflicted gun shot wound in the abdomen.

Taylor called the police station and told them of a suicide at his home. When police arrived, they found him dead. According to Cass County Coroner Richard Pugh, Taylor had been despondent.

Born July 10, 1947 at Beardstown, he was a son of Lyle and Mabel Parks Taylor, Sr.

He married Dorothy Bowman of Beardstown Nov. 25, 1968 and she survives along with a daughter, Vickie Lynn, at home.

Also surviving are his parents three sisters, Mrs. Jerald Bell of Virginia, Mrs. Robert Merriek of San Angelo, Tex., and Mrs. Robert Applegate of Beardstown; 11 brothers, Kenneth O'Hara, Raymond, Lyle, Jr., Jerry, Ivan, Robert, Melvin, Lloyd and David, all of Beardstown; Keith O'Hara of Rushville, and James Taylor in Germany.

REAR END CRASH HERE WEDNESDAY

Damage was described as minor to moderate in a two car crash on W. Morton at S. Diamond about 2:40 p.m. Wednesday.

City police said an auto driven by Karen L. Jessie, 21, of route 3 struck the rear of a car driven by Betty A. Doem, 51, of 1317 S. Clay. Brakes on the Jessie vehicle apparently failed at the time of the collision.

No citation were issued at the scene.

Hudsons End 52 Years In Dairy Business

The Hudson family will conclude 52 years of service to the Jacksonville community in the dairy business Saturday, August 26.

Mrs. William T. Hudson and her late husband started the dairy firm 52 years ago, and her two sons, Bill and Warren, have been working with the family enterprise as long as they can remember.

Home delivery of milk was the "in-thing" for years and the Hudsons had a herd of milk cows at their farm on East Morton Road.

The business has changed over the years. State regulations eliminated a good many Grade A dairy farms in the Jacksonville area simply because they were too small to conform with the regulations and purchase the necessary stainless steel equipment.

Remnants of the dairy business, milk cans, are found at farm sales frequently and now bring a premium price as antiques.

The dairy store on West Morton Road has been closed and the last home deliveries will be made on Saturday.

The Hudson Pony farm, well known throughout the midwest, will continue operations. Bill Hudson will confine his activities to the farming and Warren will continue in the real estate business. Bill, Warren and Mrs. Hudson will also be active in the mobile home park recently constructed on land that used to be pasture for the Hudson dairy herd.

THREE THEFTS REPORTED IN CITY

Judy Brown of 323 N. Clay Court reported a kitchen window screen cut to gain entrance to her apartment. The apartment was ransacked but nothing was immediately determined as missing.
